'Make Mine Pie' Title Of New OSC Bulletin

Corvallis — As kitchens bustle with activity for holiday entertaining, pie-making hints and recipes are offered Oregon cooks in a new Oregon State college extension circular, "Make Mine Pie."

Copies are available on request to Oregon residents at all county extension offices or from the OSC bulletin clerk.

Beginning cooks and experienced kitchen hands alike can produce excellent pies by following recipes carefully, says author Mrs. Ruth Klippstein, OSC's nutrition specialist.

An outline of ingredients needed for good pastry, method of mixing, baking instructions, and suggested fillings and toppings are included in the circular. It is punched for easy insertion into standard cookbooks or notebooks.

Recipes for soft wheat flour crust, meringue shells, Oregon walnut pie, and a new pretzel crust for cheese pies, are all found in the circular.

The pleasure of reading is not dying out among young readers despite the advent of television and other diversions. Mrs. Nora McKay, head of the junior department declared. On the contrary, library figures show, children are reading more than ever.

During the past fiscal year 76,776 books were checked out for home borrowing by children; 1994 new borrowers were registered, a gain of 50 per cent over the previous year's total junior registration of 4269. The current registration figure is well over 6200. On July 1, 1957 there were 13,288 books in the junior department, and 689 more had been added by the first of November. An additional thousand have been rebound to look as bright as new during the past year.

Arranged by Subject Books in the junior department are arranged by subject for the most part, using the same Dewey decimal classification that is used in the adult section.

There are sections on science, religion, music and art, sports and games, poetry and plays, travel, biography, history, fiction, fairy tales, etc. For the very young there is an alcove of bright picture books which they may have read to them or learn to enjoy by themselves while they are in the primary grades. There are also current copies of children's magazines, including American Girl, Boys Life, Child Life, Children's Activities, Highlights for Children, The Horn Book, and Jack and Jill.

The junior department of the library is a colorful, inviting place. It's a free service to residents of Medford and Jackson county; and during National Children's Book Week, Nov. 17-23, all boys and girls and their parents are especially invited to take advantage of this delightful place where excitement, adventure, and knowledge beckon from the world of books.
