The Family Council

Editor's note: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, a newspaper editor, a women's editor and two writers. Each article is a summary of an actual report. The Family Council does not give advice; it merely reports on problems that have been dealt with by responsible agencies and counselors.

Mrs. T. D.—Carl should find a handicapped girl.

Carl D.—But I only like attractive girls.

Mrs. T. D.—My husband and I are terribly concerned about our youngest son, age 28. He is a wonderful, intelligent man and has a good job, although he is physically handicapped.

Naturally we would like to see him married — if only because he needs someone to look out for him and we won't be around forever. He has some good friends among young married couples of his own age, but has rarely gone out with single girls.

We feel that since he seems to be too timid about going out with average girls, he should try to find companionship among handicapped girls. There are organizations in which he could meet them. Many are very nice and he would not have to feel self-conscious.

Carl D.—Considering my own physical imperfections, I suppose I have no right to say this—but the way I feel is that I want an attractive girl, or none at all. If attractive girls don't want me, I can't say I blame them, but I can't help feeling that love and marriage would be impossible for me without such a girl.

I was not born handicapped and have no congenital defects, so it does seem to me a little unfair that I should have to seek a wife among unfortunates like myself.

My parents let their anxiety for me run away with them. Actually, I am well able to take care of myself. I have many helpful friends—and with money you can always manage to get additional help.

The Council: Carl and his parents assume that his main problem is his physical handicap, but we have our doubts.

Actually many physically handicapped persons marry attractive members of the opposite sex and many very good marriages are made by two handicapped persons.

On the other hand, many physically sound and handsome men and women share Carl's attitude. They demand physical or mental perfection in a mate and are prepared to remain single rather than compromise.

Such individuals are really quite self-enclosed and carry a wearisome load of inferiority feelings and a childish sense of resentment—"It does seem to me a little unfair that I should have to seek a wife among unfortunates like myself."

If Carl could recognize that his problem is psychological and emotional, rather than physical,

The Hollywood Scene

Hollywood — Television is getting tough with movie stars who scoff at the new medium, as evidenced this week when Richard Egan was threatened with boycott for attacking TV ad agencies.

Because Egan criticized the electronic medium during a recent four-week tour, the actor's agents have been notified by the Madison Avenue boys that there is a move afoot to blacklist him from future TV casting.

"I couldn't care less," the husky actor replied.

"Those guys don't know anything about drama nor entertainment. They're just a bunch of salesmen."

Actor, Not Pitchman

"I'm an actor, not a soap pitchman, and I'll be damned if I'll let them push me around so they can jump into the middle of a scene and sell products that half the public doesn't want or need to begin with."

A ruggedly handsome guy with an independent attitude, Egan admits his outspoken criticism of the men who run television may hurt his career.

"I'm not afraid of them," he grinned. "They may kick movies around, but they'll never knock us out of the box."

"Big studios like M-G-M are reduced to making commercials for TV—the industry that has almost put pictures out of business. Hollywood's attitude seems to be, 'let's not offend our enemy.'"

"Look at what TV's done to people like Jackie Gleason and Sid Caesar. They didn't lose their ability. The smart boys on Madison Avenue said they weren't selling product. So off they went."

The intrepid Egan added that

TV producers and directors are scared to death of the ad boys.

No Underdeveloped Ads

"You often find underdeveloped story points in TV drama. But you never see an undeveloped commercial," Egan went on grimly.

"The big star of every TV show is the commercial. But they never warn you in advance, or advertise it that way. Commercials are filmed as high as $50,000 for 20 seconds of air time."

Egan isn't on a sour grapes kick. He's turned down hundreds of video offers, accepting only four. Currently he's being touted for an Academy Award Oscar for his role in "Slaughter on 10th Avenue."

"How the devil can you do a dramatic story in 22 minutes?" he asks. "It takes longer than

Special Session Set For Bike Citations

A special session of municipal court has been set up for children issued citations on violation of the bicycle ordinance, according to Municipal Court Judge Noreen Kelly.

The session is scheduled on Tuesdays at 8:30 a.m. in the city council chambers, she said. The judge is considering making parents of violators appear in the court session with their children.

Police chief Charles P. Chaplin said a special citation book will soon be issued to city police officers for enforcement of the bicycle ordinance. He said a more rigid enforcement program would get under way within the next few days.

The ordinance will be enforced for the safety of the bicycle riders, he said. Although the maximum fine if found guilty of violation of the ordinance is $10, the chief indicated the judge will impose offenders' bicycles up to seven days under a new amendment to the ordinance.

The year of the Mayflower II

"These, being about a hundred sowles, came over in this first ship; and began this worke, which God of his goodness hath hitherto blessed."

—Bradford's "Of Plymouth Plantation"

Last June the Mayflower II landed on our shores. The America she found was far different from the virgin land that lay open to the hardy voyagers of the original Mayflower. But the opportunity of America—for which the pilgrims gave thanks—is still here.

Certainly we should be grateful for the blessings of our country. And we should work to protect them.

One of the best ways is to provide security for our country and our families by investing in United States Series E Savings Bonds. Savings Bonds can give us a rock-ribbed emergency fund, a backlog of security that we know is safe because Bonds are backed by the strength of 170 million hard-working Americans.

Bonds can provide more blessings for us, too—a way to save for a new home, a car, a college education for our children. Bonds can't be lost, stolen or destroyed. The Treasury replaces them without charge in case of mishap. And they pay a good rate of interest—3 1/4% when held to maturity.

So plan now to make all your future Thanksgivings happier even than this year's. Start buying Savings Bonds through the Payroll Savings Plan at work or regularly where you bank.
