

Family Council

Dora A.—I want to propose to him.
Ellen R.—He should play hard-to-get.

Dora A.—I am a girl of 26 and I have a fault that people tell me will get me into a lot of trouble. I am too honest.

For the past year I have been in love with a young man who has taken me out from time to time. Sometimes I think he is very much interested in me, but then he'll disappear for weeks on end. The last time I saw him, I just blurted out how I felt about him. He seemed astounded, but pleased, and didn't say anything about his own feelings.

Naturally I thought this would bring things to a head, but nothing has happened. He takes me out occasionally as before, but doesn't even refer to what I said. I love him so much that I feel like proposing to him and getting a yes or no answer. Then I would know where I stand. My best friend thinks I'm crazy.

Ellen R.—I warned Dora against cheapening herself by telling this man how she feels about him. I told her he would never consider her after that because no man likes a woman to run after him.

I think it would be much better if Dora just turned the tables on him now—played hard-to-get and absolutely refused to see him when he calls. She doesn't seem to understand that this would be much more provocative than her being available every time he calls.

I have known Dora since childhood and I know she has always gotten into trouble by wearing her heart on her sleeve. She is the same way when she doesn't like people. She just lets them know it—even though she may happen to need their goodwill. I like this about her, but others can't take it.

The Council: Dora may be somewhat too outspoken, but we don't think Ellen's pat formulas for man-tapping are the answer to her troubles. Such formulas take all the interest and individuality out of the game.

We do think, however, that this time Dora has gone far enough with her honest approach and it won't be necessary to propose. This man is evidently thinking things over and has not arrived at any conclusion. If Dora proposes now, he'll probably be forced to say no.

If the man in Dora's life doesn't soon arrive at some decision and if she is not interested in his friendship, pure and simple, she ought to give him up—for real, not to just be "provocative."

Try and Stop Me

By BENNETT CERF

LIFE IN HOLLYWOOD is like this: a big bad man-about-town was having difficulty persuading a sweet young thing to go home and hear his hi-fi set. "Look," he implored, "how long have I known you?"

"About three quarters of an hour," she estimated coyly.

"All right then," he stormed. "Have I ever lied to you?"

A schoolgirl friend of Judy Holliday asked her, "What goes through your head when you have to kiss a half dozen different leading men in the course of a year?"

"I think of just one thing," admitted Judy candidly. "Germs!"

A rich old man threw his morning's mail angrily at his butler and grumbled, "All I ever get is stock dividends and checks!"

Highway Commission Staff Is Accused of Prolonging 9 Suits

Redmond — A John Day attorney today accused the legal staff of the State Highway commission of threatening to prolong the nine Mitchell flood damage suits until the people of Mitchell run out of money.

Referring to the Mitchell watershed of July 13, 1956, in a letter to Gov. D. Holmes, Roy Kilpatrick of Canon City, one of the attorneys for the nine remaining plaintiffs said, "the same bungling bureaucrats who caused the damage are now trying to keep the victims from being compensated."

The Mitchell residents are suing the State Highway commission for negligence in connection with the flood that extensively damaged the central Oregon city.

Claims Threat Made

In a letter to Robert B. Chessman, a member of the three-man State Highway commission, Kilpatrick said, "we have been threatened by your legal staff that they will force us to try each case and that they will appeal each case to the Supreme Court and that they have more money and more attorneys than the people of Mitchell and will be able to wear the citizens down."

Kilpatrick said the statement referred to a threat allegedly made to Dennis L. Marvin of the McKay and Panner law firm in Bend during the Oregon State Bar convention by an unidentified member of the Highway Department legal staff.

In his letter to the Governor, Kilpatrick said that a court had ruled that the damage to Mitchell was caused by the Highway Department and that the decision was not appealed. He added that in the face of this decision, no member of the Highway commission had yet made any inspection or shown any interest in the problem.

Charles H. Reynolds, chairman of the Highway commission, said he did not believe a threat to prolong the court battle had been made. He said the commission has no legal right to pay the claims and that each case should be determined by the courts on its own merits.

There are nine cases left to be tried totalling $200,000.

Radar Installation Done for UAL Planes

United Air Lines, one of three commercial airlines serving Medford, Tuesday announced that they have completed installation of radar on all planes in service.

The five million dollar program was begun at San Francisco about two years ago. United has 186 planes equipped with the equipment, according to officials.

The new equipment enables pilots to examine clouds up to 150 miles away to avoid potential turbulence. United is the first airline to equip their entire fleet. The local offices are located in the municipal airport terminal building.
