GOP Leaders Take Optimistic View Toward Balancing Budget

Washington — Republican Congressional leaders took an optimistic view today of the administration's chances of balancing the next federal budget despite planned increases in missile spending.

But no clear picture has yet emerged of what economies the administration will propose when it sends Congress next month the budget for the fiscal year beginning next July 1.

The balanced budget goal was emphasized by the White House and the GOP Congressional leaders who attended Wednesday's conference with President Eisenhower on his domestic legislative program for next year.

cal year for missile development and a number of other defense programs to answer the Soviet space age challenge. Defense sources said afterward efforts will be made to find enough savings in other defense areas to offset about $1 billion of this.

Much of Wednesday's discussion dealt directly and indirectly with the budget. Hagerty said "there was a feeling" the administration will not have to ask an increase in the present $275 billion debt ceiling when Congress reconvenes.

He and Senate GOP leader William F. Knowland (Calif.) agreed a tax reduction next year is "highly unlikely." Knowland added he is also "very hopeful there will be no tax increases."

Some of the Congressional group said there also was discussion of cutbacks or elimination of federal spending in public works, water pollution control, vocational education, disaster relief, urban renewal, the school lunch program and rural electrification.

The administration made clear Wednesday it wants Congress next year to continue its annual renewal of existing and corporate income tax rates. The automatic reduction provided for next June 30 in these levies would cost the treasury about $3 billion a year.

No overall budget figure was discussed and no indication was given whether it will be above or below the $72 billion spending estimate for this fiscal year.

Although he is still recovering from his mild stroke last week, the President presided during most of the day-long session.

Information on Rose Bowl Parade Available at CC

Pasadena, Calif. — Special Rose Bowl and Tournament of Roses information is available to chambers of commerce in Ohio and Oregon to provide faster and better service for visitors to Pasadena in connection with these events, according to the local chamber.

Suggestions on housing accommodations, parade seats, additional attractions close to Pasadena and other material is being furnished these organizations by the Pasadena Chamber of Commerce.

"Hundreds of requests for information and assistance come directly to us, and we are anxious to help, but much vital information and guidance can be furnished to these people by their local chambers of commerce," O. K. Earl Jr., president of the Pasadena chamber, said.

Hotels Filled Rooms at hotels and motels in Pasadena and the immediate vicinity are filled, but the Pasadena chamber's housing department places approximately 1,000 people in private homes each year through advance arrangement. In addition, many guests are referred to nearby cities where bus service to Pasadena is available on Jan. 1.

"The biggest problem is football tickets," Earl said. "Many people think Pasadena is the best source, when the truth is that the participating schools and conferences handle ticket distribution."

Curb vantage points for the parade are free, but people spend the night of Dec. 31 in the best places. Reserved seats in stands along the parade route are obtained directly from concessionaires and lists of these contracts are being made available to interested chambers.

In addition, the Pasadena chamber urges visitors to come several days early to enjoy the many other attractions of southern California. A calendar of events in the metropolitan area is prepared and distributed by the Pasadena chamber. Earl pointed out that all major attractions in southern California are easily accessible to the Pasadena neighborhood.

Senator Suffers Cerebral Spasm

New York — Sen. Thomas C. Hennings Jr. (D-Mo.) was reported in "fairly comfortable" condition today at Beekman-Downtown Hospital following a cerebral spasm.

A hospital spokesman said that the 54-year-old senator "slept fairly well" Wednesday night. A staff physician was in constant attendance throughout the night. Hennings collapsed Wednesday afternoon in the Federal Courthouse while presiding at a lengthy public hearing of the Senate sub-committee to investigate juvenile delinquency.

Dr. Joseph Eidelsberg, who was appearing as a witness in a neighboring courtroom, diagnosed the attack as "a slight stroke" and ordered Hennings taken by ambulance to the hospital.

Hennings' administrative assistant, Bernard Finsterwald, later said the senator had actually suffered a mild cerebral spasm "which cannot be called a stroke of any degree." He said Hennings' movement and speech were not affected.

The senator told Eidelsberg that he had suffered a similar attack three years ago.

Beck Jury Hears More Witnesses

Seattle — Additional witnesses were called by the state today as it attempted to prove charges Teamster President Dave Beck pocketed $1,900 from the sale of a union-owned Cadillac.

Beck, 63, is accused of selling a 1952 Cadillac owned by the Western Conference of Teamsters and putting the money in his private bank account.

A jury of seven men and five women was seated Wednesday after nearly three days devoted to its selection. It heard the first two of 22 witnesses subpoenaed by the state to present its case.

Roger A. Jones, administrator of the Washington State License Department's Motor Vehicle Division, was the first witness. He identified documents pertaining to the title of the car. They showed the car was purchased by the Western Conference and sold to Martin B. Duffy, a beer truck driver, in 1956 for $1,900.

Second witness was Martin J. Devine, manager of a local Cadillac agency, who identified sales slips.

The trial is being held before Judge George H. Revelle in whose court Beck's son, Dave Jr., was convicted last month on two counts of grand larceny also involving the sale of Cadillac.

Brownie Troop Visits Medford Public Library

Fourteen members of Brownie Troop 260 visited the Medford Public Library Tuesday afternoon, Dec. 3.

They were taken on a tour of all library departments by Mrs. Nora McKay, head of the junior department, and the work of the bindery, branches, cataloging, circulation, and business departments of the library was explained by Librarian Helen Webster. Leaders of the Jackson School Brownie Troop, Mrs. B. E. Culy and Mrs. C. W. Marshall, accompanied the group for the visit.
