

Mystery of the Mail Carrier

sey hadn't told his wife who his passenger was, as he usually did. I figured it must be somebody who wanted the trip kept secret. That pointed to a fugitive from the law.

"Mathis had lived near Peach Orchard Road and he probably arranged to be picked up out there so he wouldn't be seen. Kinsey probably took the job because Mathis had offered him a high price. Mathis knew, as many others did, that Kinsey carried a lot of money. He wanted that and the car, so he killed for them.

"But what really started me after Mathis was the description by the ticket agent in Chattanooga. Kinsey didn't have any scar on his neck, but Mathis did. He got it in a fight and it marked him as the murderer."
