Try and Stop Me

By BENNETT CERF

A KENTUCKY horse fancier admitted he was so anxious for his new hopeful to win his first race, he surreptitiously fed it six mint juleps in the paddock.

"Did it go out to win?" asked a friend. "No," admitted the owner, "he came in last. But he sure was the happiest horse in the race!"

At a big auto show, a dealer saw a man consult the price tag on a new model, smile happily, and summon his wife. The dealer hastily explained, "That price tag, you must realize, covers only the federal, state, county and city taxes. The price of the car is additional."

A gentleman had finished dinner in an expensive 32nd street restaurant when he was horrified to discover he didn't have enough money with him to pay the bill and customary tip. "Don't let that upset you," soothed the understanding waiter. "I'll just add up your bill again."
