

Quotes From the News

By UNITED PRESS

Hollywood—Actress Anna Kashfi, wife of Marlo Brando, on reports that the newlyweds have separated:
"Marlon and I are not separated. I'm waiting to have my baby in July. I can't understand how such reports get started."

London—A close friend of Ingrid Bergman, on reports the Swedish actress will spend the Christmas holiday with her estranged husband, Roberto Rossellini, in Rome:
"Miss Bergman plans to leave for Rome the day before Christmas. The whole family will be together to give the children a real old-fashioned Christmas. But there is no question of a reconciliation."

New York—Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell, on his claim that U.S. submarines, jet bombers and aircraft carriers are ready to fire nuclear weapons against any enemy attacker:
"In other words, we can at this or any given moment, decimate any attacker, no matter what weapons he might use against us."

Spokane, Wash.—Col. W. B. Atwell, on the crash of a B-52 jet bomber that took the lives of eight crew members:
"It was an abnormal takeoff. The plane climbed almost straight up, winged over and cartwheeled when it crashed in a muddy, plowed wheat field."

New Orleans—Harry Gallon, the San Francisco amnesia victim, discussing his feelings the moment his memory returned:
"It was like a blinding flash. I was sitting on this cement form, and it was like waking up with these lights—like watching a welder—in front of my eyes."

Washington—Adlai E. Stevenson, at the conclusion of his role as consultant and advisor on the forthcoming NATO conference in Paris:
"I think the proposals we are making at NATO will, if accepted, serve to strengthen and increase the solidarity and unity of purpose of the Atlantic community."

English Scientists Create Temperatures Much Hotter Than Sun

Harwell, England — A team of scientists in Britain's atomic research center here has created temperatures 1,000 times hotter than the sun.

It was to Zeta—it stands for zero energy thermo-nuclear apparatus—that Prime Minister Harold Macmillan referred in his Tuesday night broadcast when he said British scientists were on the threshold of "a new industrial revolution."

The doughnut flickers for an infinitesimal part of a second with an almost invisible flash which scientists claim, they fuse the nuclei of heavy hydrogen (deuterium) atoms—the first time the colossal power of the H-bomb has been controlled.

Zeta lights the faces of watching scientists who are now looking forward to the day when they can proclaim that the H-bomb has been well and truly tamed to produce a dirt-cheap and unlimited power source for peaceful uses.

Macmillan also told parliament on Dec. 10 that just how far the scientists have progressed must remain secret.

Scientists make no secret of the fact that Zeta has been successfully producing neutron particles for four months.

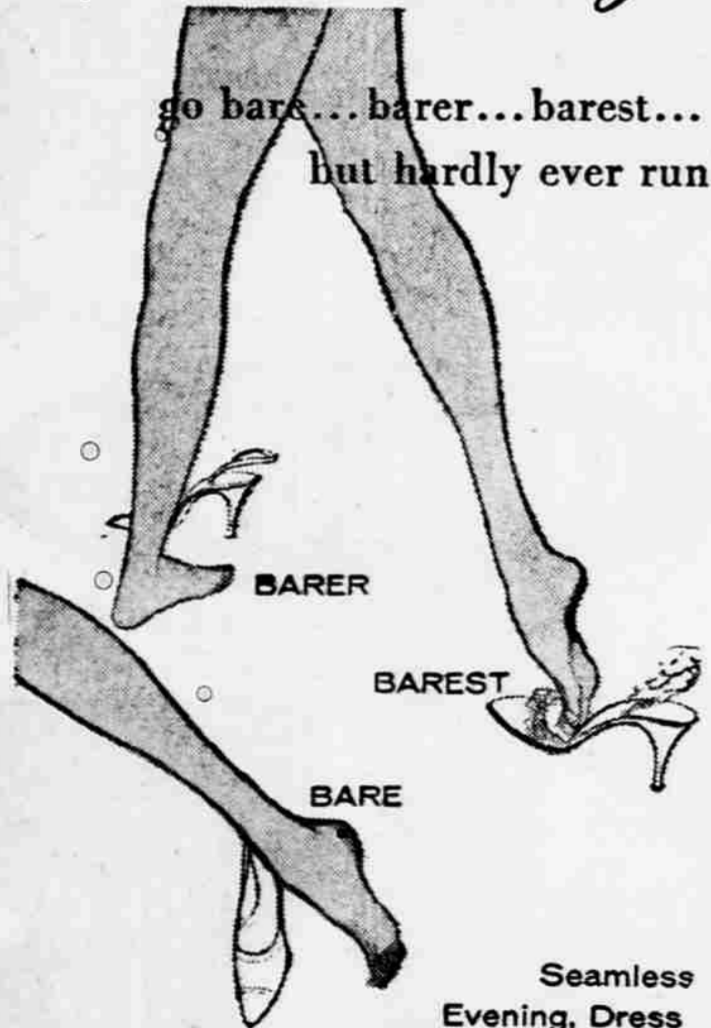

Hot Temperatures They admit the creation of temperatures "in excess" of 5,000,000 degrees centigrade—temperatures which they say are almost 1,000 times hotter than the surface of the sun where the temperature is a mere 6,000 degrees centigrade.

But they won't reveal just how near they are to their ultimate goal of 100,000,000 degrees centigrade which would be as hot as the sun's center.

The most comforting aspect of the H-bomb taming story, scientists said, is that the fuel supply of deuterium comes from the sea. Most of the hydrogen in sea water is of the ordinary type but one hydrogen atom in every 6,000 is deuterium.

This means that there is as much energy in one gallon of sea water as in 100 gallons of gasoline.
