

Church Leaders Discuss Fear of Sputnik Idolatry

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press Correspondent

Washington—Church leaders are worried about the way Americans are reacting to Russia's lead in space vehicles.

They believe the nation is becoming so Sputnik-minded that it may fall into the ancient sin of idolatry. Idolatry, in theological language, is attaching supreme importance to something besides God.

The idol which clergymen see America tempted to worship is technological prowess—especially, the ability to surpass Soviet achievements in rocketry.

Most ministers agree that launching a satellite is an important national objective. Their fear is that it is becoming a national obsession.

This concern was a dominant theme of speeches, resolutions and floor discussion at the recent General Assembly of the National Council of Churches at St. Louis. And it has since found expression in many Christmas-season sermons.

A Spontaneous Response
The Rev. Dr. Roswell P. Barnes associate general secretary of the National Council, said the emphasis was not planned in advance. . . . It was the spontaneous response of many different church leaders to the wave of "fear and jealousy" which swept over America in the wake of Russia's success—and the initial U.S. failure—in launching space vehicles.

He said churchmen are alarmed by suggestions from "some national leaders" that America should be made over into a "scientific engineering society" simply because "avowedly atheistic" Russia has developed one.

"More than once," he added, "history has witnessed the irony of a people unconsciously and unintentionally assuming the cultural characteristics of the nation it has defeated in a contest of power."

"As a nation we could establish technological superiority over Russia and become active to the Communist philosophy of materialism which we abhor."

Education Aid Emphasized
Two specific issues on which church leaders can be expected to wage a vigorous battle are education and foreign aid.

The St. Louis meeting adopted a resolution approving more to strengthen scientific education. But it emphasized that this should be part of a much broader program to improve education in general, and that scientific training must not be stressed at the expense of history, languages, social sciences and other humanities.

The assembly took a strong stand against moves to reduce or eliminate foreign economic aid to free more budget funds for missile development.

"It is not half so important that we send Sputniks circling around the globe as that we should send more leaves of bread around the world," said the Council's new president, Dr. Edwin T. Dahlberg.

"It is the hunger and misery of the vast population of the earth, the fanatical ignorance and illiteracy of oppressed peoples, that makes for war."

Suburban Effect On Churches Studied

Springfield, Ohio — The National Lutheran Council wants to know why the "move to suburbia" causes some city churches to close their doors while others remain open.

As a result, it has launched a study of "urban church effectiveness" under the direction of the Rev. Walter Kloetzli of Chicago, the council's secretary for urban church planning.

Analyzing and interpreting dozens of interviews with ministers and key laymen in Lutheran churches all over the United States is Dr. Karl H. Hertz, associate sociology professor at Wittenberg College.

Hertz hopes to lay out a positive blueprint for strengthening the city church after a survey of congregations which have been effective in coping with the changes of urban society.

Some of the problems include deteriorating neighborhoods and changing racial composition of city areas.

The Lilly Foundation of Indianapolis is helping to finance the research project.

Cities represented in the survey include New York, Chicago, Los Angeles, Milwaukee, St. Paul, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh.

Moon and the staff of Moody Institute of Science. The film features the first pictures ever taken of the interior of an actual beating heart. It follows the trail of a radio-active blood cell on a one thousand mile journey through the blood stream. It shows a woman whose heart ticks like a clock because of an artificial valve in her heart.

"Red River of Life" not only presents a significant contribution to medical knowledge, but it also presents an arresting up-to-date illustration of the biblical phrase, "The life of the flesh is in the blood," with a vivid spiritual application.

Yulelogs, clowning, singing, processions, and bonfires, all originated in Babylonia some 4,000 years ago. "Today," he said, "we have retained the practices but have tried to give a Christian meaning to them."

Greece and Rome first started the using of candles, he said. He reported that during the fourth century conferences tried to establish the time and meaning of Jesus' birth. The celebration of Christ's birth was first held in Rome either in 336 or 353 A.D.

Wesley School of Religion Offers Non-Credit Courses For Interested Students

Ashland — The Wesley School of Religion will offer two non-credit courses in religion for Southern Oregon college students during the winter term it was announced today by the director, the Rev. Louis Miles.

The first, "Art as Communication," an investigation of the nature of art forms, their meaning and importance in religion, will be taught by Steve Bayless, professor of art at the college. The other, "The Responsible Student," which will seek to understand the role of the student in the development of community life both inside and outside the college, will be taught by Mr. Miles.

Both courses will be taught at the new Wesley House, dedicated on Oct. 25 by Bishop A. Raymond Grant of the Portland area of the Methodist church, which is located at 1205 Wisconsin st. in Ashland. During the fall quarter "Understanding the Bible" was offered.

The Wesley School of Religion is sponsored by the Wesley Foundation, Methodist student organization at SOC. "It is the purpose of the Wesley School of Religion to supplement the college curriculum offerings in religion by offering non-credit courses without charge to all who are interested," Mr. Miles said. "This has been the custom at other state supported schools where the choice of courses in religion has been limited. It demonstrates that the Wesley Foundation believes that religion should be intelligently and critically examined," he added.

The entire program of the Wesley Foundation at SOC is made possible by the Methodist churches throughout Oregon through their contributions to the world service program of the total church. The SOC Foundation has received added financial aid during the last year as a part of the Methodist church's emphasis upon higher education during the 1956-60 quadrennium.

It is expected that the program will be expanded as further financial support is received. Already a part of the expanded ministry to students is the new student center, made possible through the combined efforts of the church and Jackson county business firms, and the student program which now includes a Thursday evening fellowship luncheon, a Wednesday noon luncheon discussion for commuting students, and a Sunday evening supper club.

Missionary Tells Of Experiences

Earl J. Gregg, secretary-treasurer of the Southern Rhodesia Conference of Seventh-day Adventists, was guest speaker in the Medford Seventh-day Adventist church last Saturday. Mr. Gregg brought greetings to the congregation from 40,000 fellow church members in the heart of Africa, and told of the way in which many of them wished him to express their personal gratitude to those in America who had helped send them a knowledge of the "saving power of Jesus' love."

In relating experiences in the mission territory Mr. Gregg told of a native African villager whose neighbors shunned him because they thought he had lost his mind when they saw him giving one tenth of his cattle, (their main source of wealth) as (tith) to the Lord, but who saw his faithfulness rewarded when lions molested every kraal except the one in which he kept his herd.

Mr. and Mrs. Gregg and their three boys, Lonnie, Donnie Dean and Douglas who are home on furlough after six years in the mission field spent the week end with Mr. Gregg's brother and family, the Robert Greggs, Griffin Creek rd.
