

Sputnik Headdresses Win Prizes at League Dance

The influence of recent events was evident at the annual formal ball of Medford Junior Service League Friday night at Rogue Valley Country club. Women traditionally wear fancy headdresses to the ball, both the first prize and one of the honorable mention winners were in the Sputnik theme.

Mrs. John Raapke's headdress was judged best. She wore a large globe of plastic foam around which a little satellite circled when she pressed a switch carried in her hand, and the contraption gave off a steady beep-beep-beep sound. The headgear was designed and made by her husband. Last year he had made a ski scene for Mrs. Raapke which caused much comment.

The headdress which Mrs. T. W. McFadden wore was a small metal globe of the world around which circled a little lighted satellite. This also had been made by the wearer's husband.

Also winning honorable mention was the headdress worn by Mrs. David Fortmiller, Ashland. It was a tall silver frame heavily ornamented with large red Christmas balls which matched her red gown.

League members and their guests generally agreed that this year's headdresses surpassed those of past years both in ingenuity and beauty. Miss Joyce Bearden, who will be married soon to Don Provost Jr., of Ashland, wore a three-tier wedding cake on her head. It had been made from cardboard and decorated by her father, Percy Bearden. Her evening gown was also red.

Mrs. J. D. McCann wore a large gold colored Christmas bell on her head, topped with a red ribbon bow which matched her red gown.

Mrs. Richard Schwahn's headdress was a snow man which accented her blue lace evening frock and Mrs. W. F. Cowling also wore a large globe headdress, but she had decorated hers with Christmas glitter stars and a design which indicated its theme—"Around the World in Eighty Days."

Mrs. Jack Worthington wore a wide hat topped by a little Christmas tree and a music box which played "Silent Night." Mrs. Carl Wimberley's headdress was the face of a clock and the slogan encircling it read "Party Time." The black and white clock matched her black and white checked eve-

The league president, Mrs. C. H. Buffington, wore a headdress of holly, and Mrs. J. P. Rowan's headdress was a holly wreath with a bird nest tucked among the leaves.

Mrs. N. J. Wilson wore a tiny little fir Christmas tree elaborately decorated.

If Mrs. Ray L. Casterline had not been a league member, her headdress would doubtless have won a prize. The base was a large square of plastic foam which held a tiny living room scene with fireplace, mother and father, baby bed and other ornaments. The center, or crown, of the headdress was a swirl of pink angel hair denoting heaven on which were placed five tiny baby figurines, a miniature stork and a little Sputnik. On the base, opposite to the living room scene, was placed a miniature baby chair with a sign which read "Welcome, 1958." This clever creation, the work of Mrs. John Clarke, baby-sitter for Dr. and Mrs. Casterline and their five children, was a pictorial announcement that the family expects the sixth child soon.

The wife of another Medford physician, Mrs. Malcolm Byers, also wore a family headdress. This one held a figurine representing Dr. Byers, three little angel figurines representing their three daughters and two little sprites indicating their two sons.

About 250 attended the dinner with a cocktail hour. Mrs. Jack Ingram was general chairman, and Mrs. M. D. McGeary was chairman of the headdress contest.

Christmas Party Held by Women Monday at Hotel

Scottish Rite Women's club held the annual Christmas party in the banquet room at the Medford hotel Monday noon.

The luncheon tables were decorated with sleighs filled with brightly colored packages, Christmas bell clusters, and snow-flocked fir boughs. At one end of the room was a brilliantly lighted Christmas tree.

The president, Mrs. George D. Osler, opened the luncheon with the singing of the Doxology. Mrs. Osler introduced Mrs. Bren Starcher, Mrs. Frank L. Rauch, Mrs. John P. Dickson and Mrs. Arthur L. Hadley, Denver, Colo., as guests of the club. Mrs. Hadley had belonged to the club many years before she moved to Denver.

The telephone committee was Mrs. Ralph Lue, Mrs. Root, Mrs. Verna McCallister, and Mrs. Lloyd L. Canton. The next meeting of the club will be January 13, with Mrs. McCallister as chairman.
