Flashlight Santa Claus

Walter Eckart

Trace this Santa on cardboard, color him black and cut out carefully. Take him into a darkened room with a flashlight. Hold him by the head with one hand, and hold the flashlight turned toward the wall in your other hand. Inside the circle of light on the wall, Santa's silhouette will appear, growing larger or smaller according to how near you stand to the wall. Now, by keeping the hand holding Santa perfectly still, and moving the flashlight up and down, Santa will dart back and forth over the wall. He will seem to fly close to you and then vanish. Try it!

If You Wish to Have a Star!

Jane McHenry

saw a lovely Christmas tree ornament—a silver star—that you can make for your own Christmas tree. Crumple up a sheet of newspaper into a ball the size of an orange. Cut a square of aluminum foil and cover the paper ball with it, bringing the four points of the corners together and twisting wire or a rubber band around them tightly.

Next, cut in half three silver (or gold) paper doilies from the dime store so you will have six half-circles. Turn them into little cones and tape the edges. Now fit a cone over each side of the paper ball (see drawing) and tape in place. If you leave a long tail of the rubber band and run it through the point of the top cone, you can hang up your star and it will turn and glitter. A few sequins pasted here and there add to its glamor!
