Ike's Speech Plans May Be Called Off

Gettysburg, Pa. — The White House said Saturday that President Eisenhower may be forced to call off plans to make a major political speech in Chicago Jan. 20.

He is scheduled to address a Republican fund-raising dinner.

Press Secretary James C. Hagerty said the President still "hopes" to keep the engagement but has advised GOP leaders that his heavy work schedule during the opening weeks of Congress may keep him in Washington.

The Republican high command had hoped Mr. Eisenhower would deliver a hard-hitting partisan talk in the heart of the farm belt where the party faces trouble in this year's congressional elections.

Fund-raising dinner are scheduled throughout the country on the night of Jan. 20. Hagerty said Mr. Eisenhower may speak to the Washington dinner if he cannot go to Chicago. A firm decision will be made early next week, he said.

as a possible prelude to Red arms shipments, it was reported Saturday.

Missing Family Found In L. A.

Bend, Ore. — An intensive air and ground search here and in the foothills of the Cascade mountains ended Saturday when the James R. Thompson family of Bend, object of the hunt since New Year's day, turned up in Los Angeles.

Thompson, 26-year-old typewriter repairman, expressed surprise when he learned he and his wife Ramona, 24, and their two-year-old daughter had been sought by nearly 100 persons, including police, Civil Aeronautics authority ground crews and volunteers in the Bend area. Thirteen airplanes were pressed into the search earlier Saturday.

The three "disappeared" under circumstances that baffled authorities. O. J. Dockham, next door neighbor and owner of the house the Thompsons were renting, told police that Thompson said they were "going out for dinner" when they left in their car. Dockham said the oil heater was left burning in the house, but they never returned.

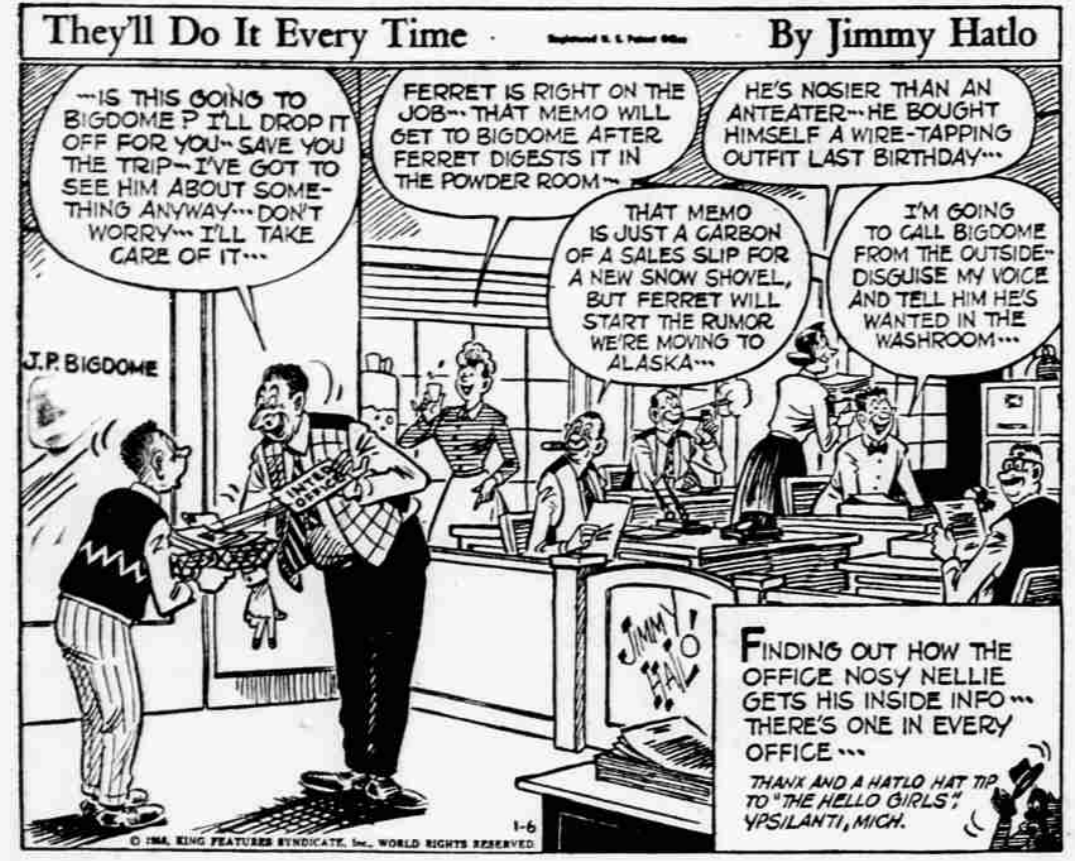

"I just decided to quit my job and look for work in southern California," Thompson said in Los Angeles after being contacted at the home of his step father, Clayton Hatley. They had been at the Hatley home since their arrival Jan. 2.

Police feared Thompson may have gotten off onto a side road and become snow-bound. Most roads off Highway 97, the main route through Bend, are covered with snow.

The Thompsons moved to Bend from Boise, Idaho, last August.

German Schools Established To Combat Commie Subversion

Bonn, Germany — Three special schools have been established in West Germany to combat Communist subversion.

But they are not concerned with the strange, half-world of spies, underground couriers, and state secrets.

Their purpose is to counter the Communist attack in the world of ideas, and to prepare Western minds for service on the ideological battleground.

Opening the "Eastern College in Cologne, West German Interior Minister Gerhard Schroeder warned that Communism's main aim remained world revolution.

It was not enough, he added, to fight Communism by "laws, court decisions and administrative measures."

The struggle must also be waged on the political and intellectual level where the ideology and half-truths of Communist doctrine could be weighed in the balance and compared to the ideals of Western democracy.

Has Precedent — The Cologne College, patterned on Britain's Wilton Park where Germans studied democratic processes after World War II, has 10 resident professors who arrange the week-long courses while some 60 experts on Soviet affairs, both German and foreign are available as guest lecturers.

Subjects dealt with include dialectical materialism, Soviet economic development, the church under Communist rule, natural science in the Soviet Union, and a general outline of Russian history.

The college is designed to attract persons, who by virtue of their positions in public life, can best counter the Communist ideological attack.

A second school — the "institute for eastern law" — has been established in Munich, especially to study the legal basis of Communist states.

Addressing the institute recently, Bundestag Parliament Vice President Richard Jaeger said that in the Soviet Union and its satellite states law was an instrument of the ruling class, designed to uphold the power of the Communist party, and linked neither legally nor morally to any independent standards.

He warned that the real danger to the West would come when the Soviet Union had in some measure matched Western material progress and was ready for an all-out offensive on the ideological front.

The third school, the "Institute for Eastern Churches," which is attached to the theological faculty of Muenster's Wilhelm university, has a more limited aim of studying the history of the Protestant church in Germany's eastern territories, and making its findings available to church communities.

The Family Council

Editor's note: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, a newspaper editor, a women's editor and two writers. Each article is a summary of an actual report. The Family Council does not give advice; it merely reports on problems that have been dealt with by responsible agencies and counselors.

Raymond S. — Mother won't come to live with us. Mrs. R. S. — My daughter-in-law bears a grudge.

Raymond S. — I am the only child of a widowed mother. When I was married three years ago, my mother objected very much to the match. My wife happens to be of a different faith, but aside from that, my mother had many other faults to find with her.

Now my mother has been in poor health and I would like her to come live with us. I feel that my wife has been very generous and forgiving about the whole thing and is willing to have my mother with us. But my mother is as difficult as ever. She won't come, even though it means she must be dependent on neighbors when she isn't well.

My mother isn't ill enough to be in a hospital, but I am constantly worried that something serious will happen while I'm away.

Mrs. R. S. — My son and daughter-in-law are trying to be kind to a helpless old woman, but they don't care for me and I would be a terrible burden on them.

My daughter-in-law is the type who pretends to be nice and easygoing, but underneath she holds grudges. I can tell the way she looks at me that she has never forgiven me for the way I acted before they were married.

When my son is around, she would treat me nicely, but when he'd go away she'd come out in her true colors. I am still able to shift for myself. In fact, I can even help others because I've done some sewing for the neighbors who helped me.

The Council: Mrs. R. S. is not ready to move in with her son at this time, but much can be done to improve relationships in this family.

He added: "There is no change in Thailand's foreign policy of adhering to the ideals and aims of the United Nations and the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization. We will continue to adhere to this treaty to uphold the policy of collective security with all member countries."
