American Airman Faces Trial in Greek Court

Athens, Greece — A 22-year-old American airman goes on trial here Jan. 20 on manslaughter charges — the first U.S. serviceman to be tried by a Greek court and a storm center in the touchy question of national sovereignty.

Airman C/Marion Musilli, of Benwood, W. Va., is charged with involuntary manslaughter in the death of Gen. Staphanos Saraphis, wartime leftist underground leader and a member of Parliament.

Saraphis' political connections have put Musilli squarely in the center of political strife—and provided a field day for leftist agitation against the U.S.-Greek "status of forces" agreement. "Extraterritorial Rights" The agreement has been attacked here as a form of "extraterritorial rights" for America.

The auto accident which took the Greek political leader's life—and injured his English-born wife, the former Marion Pasco—took place last May 30.

Musilli was driving an Air Force car on a highway near the Athens airport when the accident occurred.

The car struck Saraphis and his wife when they were crossing the road en route to the seaside. The death of Saraphis immediately aroused a storm in the Greek press. There were even whispers that the death was no accident—that it was carefully planned to get Saraphis out of the way.

But even for the majority of Greeks who put no stock in such rumors, the problem was a troubling one. At that time the Greek government had not yet ratified its "status of forces" agreement with the U.S. But ratification of the agreement spelling out the status of American troops here was rushed through Parliament after the accident.

Dangerous Bars Seen by Douglas

Washington — Justice William O. Douglas thinks some of his Supreme Court colleagues are raising dangerous bars against sex literature and otherwise restricting freedom of expression.

The theme of his new book published today—"The Right of the People"—is that America's Democratic ideal is being eroded. He lays part of the blame on the court itself.

The volume comprises lectures Douglas delivered last spring at Franklin and Marshall College in Lancaster, Pa., updated to include comment on certain decisions at the end of the last court term.

One of his major complaints is with a decision which set up a standard to determine obscenity. It upheld the validity of the federal obscenity law which makes it a crime to send obscene material through the mail.

Burglars Get $60 In Portland 'Job'

Portland — Burglars stole $60 in cash, a roll of stamps and 83 blank company checks from the Ross Island Sand-Gravel company early today but failed in an attempt to open the safe, police reported.

The items stolen were taken from a filing cabinet. It was the ninth actual or attempted safe burglary here in the 16 days of the new year.

Demonstration of Sno-Cats Slated At SCS Meeting

Ralph (Bud) Ash, recreation chief at the Camp White Domiciliary, will demonstrate three types of Tucker Sno-Cats at a Soil Conservation Service snow survey training conference in Jackson, Wyo., Jan. 20-24.

Ash, a former SCS employee, has had experience in operating over snow equipment and snow measuring. Nine types of over snow vehicles, including the three Tucker products, will be demonstrated.

W. F. (Jack) Frost, formerly of Medford, will discuss the relation of water supply forecasting to farm and ranch planning at the conference. Frost is now with the SCS in Portland.

Heads Delegation
Heading the Oregon delegation will be R. A. Work, formerly of Ashland, now with the SCS's water supply forecasting section.

About 150 men from the nine western states will participate in the conference. Also expected to attend are representatives from New Zealand, British Columbia and Alaska.

Special classes will be conducted by H. I. Hunter, British Columbia authority on avalanches, and M. M. Swater, an avalanche authority in the United States.

E. J. Mongeon, director of first aid and water safety, American Red Cross, will demonstrate first aid in snow training.

Roaring First Hour By Street Follows Reduced Margins

New York — The stock market greeted reduced margins today with a roaring first hour and then settled down to a strong, active session without spectacular developments in any sector.

Volume crossed three million shares before the end of the fourth hour and was the best of the year. Incentive for today's up-thrust came overnight when the Federal reserve surprised the street with a margin cut from 70 per cent to 50 per cent, the first cut since Feb. 20, 1953, when it was lowered from 75 per cent to 50 per cent.

Prices moved up one to three points at the opening today on large volume of big blocks ranging to 10,000 shares in U. S. Steel and Royal Dutch. First hour deals carried the industrial average above 450, considered a strong resistance level. It ran into selling there, cutting gains in half. Later the list came back from the lows but did not exceed the first hour levels.

Today's prices on selected stocks:
Allied Chemical 76 1/2
American Can 42 1/2
A T & T 170 1/2
Anaconda Copper 41 1/2
