

Bright Forecast Given on Jerseys

A bright future is depicted for the Jersey cow, according to Rosel H. Hunter, western fieldman for the American Jersey Cattle Club.

Hunter outlined the evolution of the all-Jersey milk programs for the 23 members and guests present at a recent meeting of the Rogue River Jersey Cattle club at the Dardanelle.

Marlin Fox, program manager in Oregon, continued the story by pointing out the rapid expansion of the All-Jersey since being taken over by the national club last year. Twenty-eight states now carry the All-Jersey franchise.

J. E. Parsons, president of the local Jersey club, outlined a work program for the coming year and named his committee chairmen.

Carolyn Tieg, the Jersey princess, and her mother were introduced. Carolyn spoke briefly on her recent trip to Chicago to attend the National 4-H Club Congress.

Guests present were: Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hopewell and Bill Gilman of Eagle Point, Mrs. L. S. Tieg and daughter, Carolyn, Talent; Pete Belcastro and Francis Sullivan, Weed, Calif.; Rex Ross, breeder and importer of Jersey Cattle, Mount Angel, Ore.; Hunter, Corvallis, Ore.; Fox, Molalla, Ore. and Earle Jossey, Jackson county extension agent.

Spraying Performs Double Duty Job

Corvallis — Oregon mint growers can "kill two birds with one stone" in their spring spray programs to control weeds and mint rust, report Oregon State college agricultural experiment station researchers.

Karmex DW, the new chemical weed killer, and dinitro amine for control of mint rust can be mixed in the same tank for effective control of both weeds and rust, say C. E. Hyorner, OSC plant pathologist, and W. R. Furtick, agronomist.

Two to three pounds per acre of Karmex DW, depending on soil type, and 3 to 4½ pounds of dinitro amine mixed with 30 gallons of water gave excellent control in OSC tests when applied before shoots emerged in the spring.

The researchers caution against applying the spray after mint emerges. Furtick said Karmex damage to mint that virtually wiped out some plantings in central Oregon in 1956 was caused by spraying after mint plants were up.

Advisory Group To Hold Meeting

Salem — The potato advisory committee to the Oregon state department of agriculture will meet in Salem Jan. 22 at the agriculture building, according to plant industry chief Frank McKennon.

The group will review the Oregon potato law as recently amended to determine if it fulfills needs of the industry with respect to present-day marketing practices.

Labeling of potatoes will be one of the points of interest at this meeting. There is some question among the industry as to whether potato containers should be tagged or if the labeling information should be printed or stenciled right on the container.

Wesley McKaig, Klamath Falls, is chairman of the potato advisory committee; Merrill Webb, Redmond, serves as secretary.

Short Course Set For All Sprayers

Corvallis — Chemical warfare against insects, plant diseases, weeds and other pests will be reviewed in a special short course for Oregon chemical sprayers and dusters, Jan. 27 to 31, at Oregon State college.

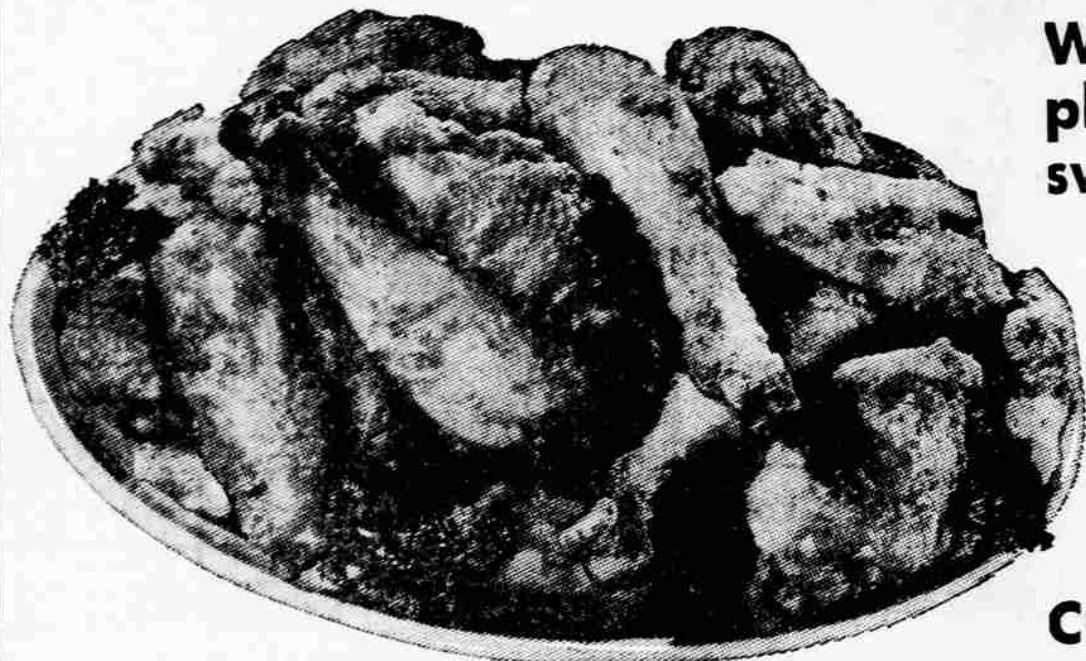

Now in its seventh year, the Oregon agricultural chemical applicators short course is sponsored by the state department of agriculture in cooperation with OSC Registration fee is $10 for the five-day course arranged by Ray Kelso, supervisor of herbicides for the state department of agriculture, and L. C. Terriere, OSC agricultural chemist.

Kelso will conduct licensing examinations the closing day for any operators who wish to take the state test. More than 230 licensed agricultural sprayers and dusters are now listed in Oregon.
