Tax for Education Displeases Labor

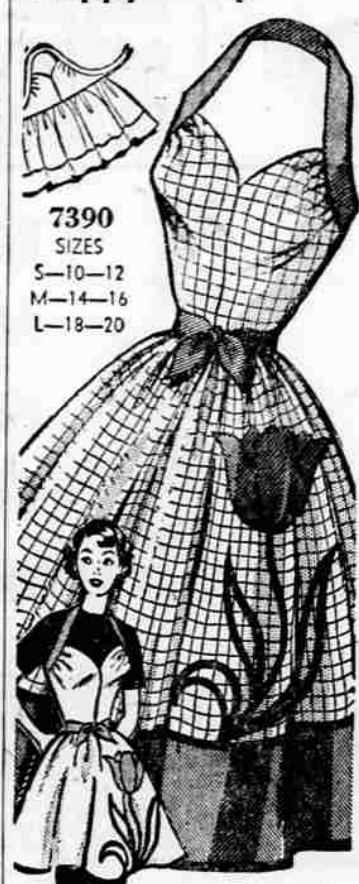

Portland — James T. Marr, executive secretary of the Oregon State Labor Council, AFL-CIO, said Tuesday that a proposal by State Sen. Walter J. Pearson suggesting a state education tax to help finance Oregon schools was "completely unsatisfactory to labor."

Marr said the Portland Democrat's plan "violates the principle of ability-to-pay by destroying Oregon's present personal income tax structure." The earmarking feature would "lead to governmental extravagance in a budget area that is and will continue to be the largest for years to come," he charged.

Pearson's plan would take school costs out of the property and income tax fields.

Deputy District Attorney George Woodrich said the dealers would face possible court action if they didn't. He said in letters to each dealer that "we are genuinely concerned with the effect such indecent publications have on young people of the community."

Woodrich said that law enforcement personnel would return to previously inspected locations within 10 days to determine what publications are displayed in apparent violations of the law.

Portland — The State Board of Health will recommend waiver of all residency requirements for aliens, thus apparently ending a discussion of whether tuberculosis-infected Korean war orphans adopted by Oregon parents can be treated in state hospitals.
