Northern California Rains Tapering Off; Midwest Gets Snow

By UNITED PRESS
Forecasters today predicted more rain and snow for the storm battered northeastern quarter of the country, but flooding rains tapered off in Northern California.

The West Coast rains turned to snow in the higher elevations, hampering the search for Dennis Wurschmidt, 12, who became separated Saturday from a Boy Scout troop in Mendocino National Forest in California. About 500 men, aided by a helicopter, searched the Grindstone Canyon area for the youth today. Residents evacuated.

Week end downpours sent floodwaters pouring through sections of Martin County, Calif., north of San Francisco. Firemen evacuated residents from 40 homes in Kentfield Saturday when floodwaters reached more than four feet. Streets in San Rafael and San Anselmo also were flooded.
