Marshal Reports — City Fire Marshal Truman Nelson reported inspection of a warehouse and five business occupancies yesterday. He issued seven orders for correction of hazards.

Line Breaks — Firemen were called to standby until California Oregon Power company repaired a 4,000 volt line which broke about 1 p.m. yesterday on Oak st. between Jackson st. and Fairmont ave.

Acting Superintendent — Raymond Rundell, assistant superintendent of the Crater Lake National park, is acting superintendent of the Grand Coulee Dam park. He will be in the Coulee Dam area until the new superintendent arrives, according to local authorities.

Accident — Vehicles operated by Winifred D. Brownson, 48, of 147 Ohio st., Ashland, and Roger Lee Harris, 19, of Klamath Falls, were involved in an accident on Highway 99 near Talent about 5:15 p.m. yesterday, according to state police. The car driven by Mrs. Brownson was stopped in the inside lane prior to turning left when the Harris vehicle approached from the rear, striking it, police said. Police cited Harris for violations of basic rule.

Ceramic Coating Aids War on Smog

Chicago — An art almost as old as man is making a special contribution to the war against smog and air pollution.

Scientists in the field of ceramics at the Illinois Institute of Technology reported recently they have developed a non-metallic coating for auto piston heads which promises a significant reduction in the carbon monoxide and unburned hydrocarbons in exhaust fumes.

Samuel W. Bradstreet, supervisor of inorganic technology at IIT's Armour Research Foundation, said the coating also may effect better thermal insulation, higher combustion efficiency and more economical operation for motorists.

The coating stemmed from a process patented by ARF called "flame ceramics." The process produces coatings by spraying non-metallic powders through a flame gun.

A Chicago firm, the Continental Coating Corp., holds an exclusive license to the process.

STUDIES SPORTS MEDICINE

Geneva, Switzerland — The World Health Organization's executive council has adopted a Scandinavian proposal to study the possibility of including sports medicine in the regular WHO program. The proposal pointed out that sports and exercise were becoming more and more important as industrialization and automation rendered many jobs sedentary.

Venezuela Has Welcome For Hungarian Refugees

Caracas — Venezuela has taken in 1,500 Hungarian refugees in its continuing policy of welcoming "men and women who have the skills to help build a rounded economy."

Many of the Hungarians will be settled on model farms, of which they will be given ownership. They are counted on to help develop a program which already is making Venezuela self-sufficient in agricultural production.

The model farms, at 21 communities such as Turen and Chiraguá, are fostered by the National Agrarian Institute. The government has built houses, barns and silos, and provided the most modern types of agricultural equipment.

In a related move to boost agricultural production, as well as to improve supply of hydro-electric power, several large dam and irrigation projects are also nearing completion to provide vitally needed water.

The latest such water conservation project is that located at Guarico, being constructed at a cost of $65,000.00. A nine-mile earthen dam, long-stem in the world, stores up to 500 billion gallons of water in a 94 square mile lake.

Situated amid the vast llanos (plains) once famous for their huge herds of cattle, the Guarico dam will yield water to be siphoned off during the dry summer months through 290 miles of irrigation canals to irrigate 300,000 acres of prime farm land.

Flavor Puzzle To Scientists For Long Time

Tulsa, Okla. — Why do most people like strawberries? The flavor, of course.

But what is flavor? Do strawberries taste the same to everyone?

Those were among the many fascinating questions discussed at the recent convention here of the American Council of Independent Laboratories.

The problem of flavor and how to preserve it is the direct concern of a young New Yorker, Murray Berdick, a Ph.D. working for Evans Research and Development Corp.

The nature of flavor has been a puzzle to scientists for a long time. They know it's a combination of chemical materials — the flavor of strawberries is made up of some 40 different chemicals.

These chemicals, Berdick said, are translated into flavor through taste and smell. But people's tastes vary greatly, and it is not known for sure if everybody reacts to taste in the same way.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture is now conducting experiments with strawberry flavor and the American Coffee Institute is doing the same thing with coffee.

"We don't know how to recreate the flavor of strawberries, using the exact same chemicals that nature does, because, even though we know which chemicals are present, we don't know in what quantities," said Berdick.

Artificial strawberry flavor isn't quite the real thing, thought it may seem so, Berdick added.

The biggest problem is how to preserve the flavor while preserving the food. Sometimes food can be kept safely for long periods of time, but the flavor won't stay put.

"Freezing is the best known means of preserving flavor," Berdick says. "That's second only to the fresh item. Next comes canning, and last of all is dehydrating."

A new and as yet relatively unused method of preserving food, radiation, is a big question mark.

"Some foods keep their flavor when preserved by radiation, others lose their flavor quickly," he said. "Perhaps an area where farm and cattle production was hampered by periodic droughts.

In all, 38,14 European farm immigrants have come to Venezuela under a plan by which those selected after passing tests as to their physical fitness and technical ability, have all their transportation and resettling expenses paid. Many others have come, paying their own way.

Most of these people have emigrated from western Europe — Italy, Portugal, Spain and the Canary Islands. The rate at which they are arriving in Venezuela increases constantly, jumping from under 10,000 in 1945 to more than an estimated 50,000 in 1957.

Passage of the Hungarian refugees was paid for in part by a fund raised by fellow-countrymen who had already immigrated to Venezuela. An average contribution of $25 brought a total of $50,000 into the relief fund.

A way will be found to keep the flavor uniform through radiation.

Stocks Irregular After Early Advance

New York — Stocks turned irregular today after an early advance had carried the railroad and industrial averages to new highs on the recovery movement.

Late in the day the list was irregular. A long list showed gains of a point or better, but the main list fell back from early highs and was irregular.

Royal Dutch, selected as the stock of the month by Standard & Poor's, was heavily traded. It moved up slightly.

The oil section late in the session declined from the day's highs and many issues of the group registered declines.

Today's prices on selected stocks:

Allied Chemical	76 3/4
American Can	42 7/8
A T & T	17 1/2
Anaconda Copper	43 1/2
Bethlehem Steel	39 3/8

HIGH FINANCE

San Jose, Calif. — The U. S. government took $4,743,206 in taxes and interest from the $9,946,135 estate of Gertrude Achilles, and now admits it made a slight error in figuring the bill. The estate, officials said, owes Uncle Sam another 87 cents.

CRYSTAL BALL SLIPPED

Knoxville, Tenn. — Fortune teller Margaret C. Smith's clairvoyance failed her Wednesday. She did not perceive that customer Lula Bell Hagaman was a policeman, nor foresee that she would be under charges today of telling fortunes without a license.

NO MORE VIOLIN

Portland, Me. — George Gallagher's $2,500 violin fell out of his auto as he drove over Veteran's Memorial Bridge. Before he could retrieve it, another motorist stopped, picked up the violin and drove away.

STATE PROMOTION

Augusta, Me. — Maine is seeking to become known as "The Blue Chip State" as part of its effort to attract top-drawer industries. The Department of Economic Development is distributing blue chip poker chips with that legend printed on them and with small chains attached so they can be used for key rings.
