

Real Chemise Back in Stores

By United Press
The "real" chemise is back under spring chemise dresses. The old-fashioned undergarment gets a new look in nylon, rayon and cordura crepe, usually trimmed with eyelet embroidery or lace. One model, the "chemisette," is fitted at the top and falls in an unbroken line to the mid-thigh.

Waltz-length nightgowns for spring take their styling straight from the Charleston era. The nighties have low waists and set just below the hips or at the knees. One flapper-type gown of cotton pique comes trimmed with lacy ball fringe.

Fashions come out long on necklaces and short on silhouettes this spring, say jewelry designers. Trifari shows rope necklaces ranging from 30 to 120 inches long.

Designer Jo Copeland holds that hems should catch the eye in summer evening gowns. She shows big roses at hemlines, embroidery on slip hems under sheer over-skirts, lace inside skirts, and full, floor-length skirts that are short on one side.

Flowers, leaves and stems sprout from turbans by Tatiana, milliner for Saks Fifth Avenue. She designed a towering turban in royal blue yelling that is latched with forget-me-nots. A pink rose spray of forget-me-nots and pink and white fruit blossoms trim a flower-printed organza turban. Bunches of little green stems stand up through one hat and bob in the breeze.

Wearing two hats will be the fashion if Adolfo of Emme has his way. The Cuban-born designer shows big, floppy brimmed straws over turbans. Large flowers tacked to the turbans peek out on both sides of the straws.

Resort Cottons In Hot Colors

Travel-bound cottons in a bright array of hot color combinations promise to bring lots of excitement to resort settings reports the National Cotton council.

Cottons glow with the sun's rays, sparkle from the reflection of the sea and blossom in fruit and flower hues. The effect is one of elegance and splendor in easy-care cotton broadcloths, piques, jacquards and herringbones. New coat and dress ensembles in long-lined silhouettes and sports outfits in active and spectator versions make the most of these colorful cottons.

Cotton knits have new faces, inspire new figures. In daytime and evening versions, they are flowered, spotted, striped, textured and surrealistic in pattern.

Sheer cottons whisper in lightened weights. It is the sheer look that shapes the new figure; it is the sheer look that travels in comfort and unpacks with ease. Colors from ice-cream tints to heat-wave brights take to billowy voiles, cotton chiffons and crepes and airy batistes. Designers have whipped up into the sheerest feminine delights every kind of fashion.

Grade Teacher Stages Parties In Spare Time

By GAY PAULEY
United Press Correspondent
New York — Move over, Mrs. Mesta. Make room for another hostess with the moses. In this case, patience. She is Lois M. Freeman, who's been staging parties for 11 years and hasn't had a debacle yet. Only a little spilled lemonade or ice cream along the way.

Miss Freeman, a Manhattan grade school teacher, supervises children's parties in her spare time. In the years she's been taking over where mothers left off, she has directed more than 3,600 parties for children 5 to 11 years old. "Great fun," said the tall, darkhaired teacher. "You never know what will happen next."

What Is Mother Doing?
Miss Freeman hit on the idea for party planning while she was a high school senior. "I thought, what DO mothers do at parties... aren't they awfully busy in the kitchen?" Her first party was for a neighbor's child.

But the word spread and, all during her years at Hunter College, she kept up her sideline. Now she has a staff of 13 counsellors, most of them recruited from Hunter, Barnard and other metropolitan colleges. Each gets a training period which includes at least one visit to a party with her.

"One test they all must pass," said Miss Freeman. "They've got to be willing to sit on the floor." Trademark of a Freeman counsellor is a small red suitcase, equipped with a variety of game potentials from scotch tape to peanuts.

Kids Go For 'Murder'
"The all-time favorite with the children is a game called 'murder,'" said the party planner. "An eight-year-old girl taught it to me, and it is perfectly harmless. Has to do with the children drawing cards to determine which one shall be the murderer—the ace determines this—and which shall be the detectives. The detectives leave the room while the rest of the children dream up alibis to prove they didn't do it."

When the detectives return, the children start explaining where they were on the night of "And," said Miss Freeman, "a child psychiatrist would have a field day with some of the answers."

Miss Freeman said her clientele is varied, and not necessarily wealthy. One of her counsellors once supervised a party in a cemetery—it was for the caretaker's daughter.

Suitable for both travel and town is this coat and dress ensemble of knitted cotton. A firmly woven striped cotton lines the coat. The ensemble was made by Vogue Pattern No. S-4764, designed especially for knitted fabrics.

A tucked front and extra full sleeves make this dress by Joan Bellevue a popular subteen fashion. Satin striped yellow and white cotton is used in the dress.

Here's a dress designed for those glamorous evenings when a full-length formal is required. Printed velveteen or an embroidered cotton would be a perfect fabric for this off-the-shoulder frock made by McCall's Pattern No. 4189.

South of the Border Chicken Good Dish

Chicago — Here's an easy way to give fried chicken a south-of-the-border flavor.

First marinate the cut-up chicken in olive oil. Then remove the chicken and roll each piece in fine dry bread crumbs which have been seasoned with salt and pepper. Lay the chicken in a shallow pan and bake it in a moderate oven (350) degrees for about 45 minutes.

The Spanish call this "pollo empanada" which means "chicken in bread."

Almonds Add to Dessert
New York — An easy way to dish up a fancy dessert is to top ice cream, pudding or cake with slivered almonds. Cut the almonds immediately after bleaching when they are soft and tender. Spread them in a shallow pan and roast in a slow oven (300 degrees), stirring frequently until light brown. Add them "as is" to the dessert or sprinkle over a rich topping, such as chocolate or marshmallow sauce.

Pone Pancakes
New York — Corn pone pancakes get the family off to a good start on winter mornings. Follow directions for corn bread on a box of yellow or white enriched corn meal. Fry the batter as for pancakes in a lightly greased skillet. Pour on syrup or honey and serve warm with sausages, bacon or ham.

Horticulturist Gives African Violet Care

Minneapolis — Proper room temperature, the right light and moist soil will help in raising luxurious African violets, according to the University of Minnesota Horticulture department.

The violets thrive best at a uniform day temperature of 75 degrees fahrenheit and a night temperature between 67 and 70. Good light is necessary, but avoid direct sunlight in the winter months.

Watering is very important. Always use water of room temperature. Keep the plant out of the direct sunlight when foliage is wet or the leaves might spot. It is a good idea to water from the top once every two weeks.

Dip For Dieters
New York — The hostess who would be kind to friends' waistlines will find this low-calorie dip as tasty as rich canapes. Beat creamy cottage cheese in a blender of sour cream. Flavor with dried parsley flakes, ground dill seed, and instant minced onion. Instead of crackers or potato chips, serve fresh vegetable strips for dipping.
