

Parents Continue Code Study

A group of 33 parents met in the home of Mrs. John Schroeder, president of McLoughlin Junior High Parent-Teacher association last Wednesday to begin an organized study of the feasibility of a code of social conduct for students of McLoughlin Junior High school. The code study is a project adopted for further study by the association. The group decided to continue the study in a series of weekly meetings to be held each Wednesday afternoon from 1 p.m. to 2:30 p.m. at the home of Mrs. John Schroeder, 413 North Columbus avenue, until further notice. Mrs. Schroeder states that she has ample room for 50 people and extends a cordial invitation for all interested parents to attend. An attendant will be provided for child care. The group also decided to arrange for a few evening meetings for those parents who are unable to attend the afternoon meetings. The time and place will be announced later. The combined groups will meet together at the close of the series of discussion, and it is hoped by that time the group will be able to arrive at a parent's version of what categories the code of conduct should cover. Similar meetings will be held by the students of McLoughlin Junior High school. Mrs. Clayton Ruhl and Mrs. Roy Elmgren are co-chairmen for this study. Last week, Mrs. Ruhl conducted the organizational meeting and discussion and Mrs. Elmgren was coordinator for the group. Mrs. Bill Rambo brought the parents up to date on the acceptance and progress of such codes of conduct being tried in other cities throughout the nation. It was announced that parents having reading material

AAUW Memorial Grant Announced at Luncheon

Announcement of a $500 scholarship grant, to be known as the Medford Memorial grant, was made at the annual fellowship luncheon meeting of the Medford branch of American Association of University Women at the Rogue Valley Country club Saturday. The grant is being made in memory of Mrs. Aletha Vawter, Mrs. Frank Roberts, the former Thora Smith Lawrence, and Mrs. Annie (Walter G.) Garner.

Money for the grant comes from the annual Children's Theater production, to be held this year on February 18 when the Southern Oregon College players will present "Cinderella" in two performances at the Craterian theater. Money for the grant also comes from the branch's Radio Story hour, heard weekdays at 4:15 p.m. over KYJC. Two exchange students from Southern Oregon College, Miss Heike Schneider of Germany and Miss Susana Bianchi of Chile, were guest speakers.

Marathon Tea Party Begins

By GAY PAULEY United Press Women's Editor New York — A marathon tea party began in our town today.

The 53th annual tea-tasting session is on, with a group of seven experts feeling, sniffing and "swooshing." This'll go on the rest of the week, with more than 100 varieties of tea, selected at random from bonded warehouses, getting the once-over.

Tea tasting is serious business. The experts will set the standards for the quality of tea which may be imported in the 12 months beginning May 1. This whole process dates to 1897, the Tea Council of the U.S.A. reports. That year, American merchants, fed up with getting a lot of non-tea among the tea leaves, set up their own testing panel. That roughly could be expensive, when you consider that it takes 10,000 leaves to make a pound of tea as we buy it today.

When the Pure Food and Drug Act was passed in 1903, a government expert was added to the industry panel. He also samples tea the year round, to make sure that new shipments meet the standards set this week.

This year's panel consists of Albert Guarino and Alexander Grille, both of New York; Edward Bransten and Thomas Moss, San Francisco; Phillip Hellyer, Chicago; Angus McAdam, Boston, and Robert H. Dick, the federal examiner. The tests are held each year in the "tea room," a plain ordinary office, at the downtown Manhattan headquarters of the Food and Drug administration.

Tasters seat themselves at a circular, revolving table. Before them are carefully weighed samples in handle-less white china cups.

Then comes the "swooshing." Boiling water from big, steaming kettles nearby is poured over the leaves. The experts watch the leaves unfold, observe the color of the tea, sniff the aroma and, after the stuff has brewed exactly five minutes, lift the leaves from the cup and feel them. Now comes the "swooshing," as they dip the brew into their mouths from outside tea-spoons.

No swallowing, however. The tasters "park the brew in a three-foot, funnel-like container once commonly known as a goboon.

"Tea tasting is a little like wine tasting," said panelist Guarino, who's been sipping since 1924. But since the tea is only "swooshed," and not downed, there is no need for clearing the palate between samples.

"One thing's sure," said a tea council official. "If they had to clear their palates, it wouldn't be with coffee."

Carpenter Home Is Chosen for "Record Houses"

Two Oregon homes, one in Medford and the other in Portland, are included among 20 selected by the editors of Architectural Record for presentation in "Record Houses of 1958," an annual mid-May issue devoted to outstanding achievements in house design. Five homes in the West will be included.

The Medford home is that of Mr. and Mrs. Dunbar Carpenter, located in Veritas Orchards, Foot Hills road. The home received a merit award in the 1957 Western Home Awards program sponsored by the American Institute of Architects and Sunset Magazine.

The home was designed by George T. Rockrise, San Francisco architect. Built on a flat-topped hill, the U-shaped house encloses a garden court. A long porch-patio runs the full length of the house on the south with pavement beyond, offering varied outdoor dining and recreation areas. Criteria used for the Architectural Record selection included appearance, spatial organization, structural design, and design of electrical and mechanical systems.

The Portland home is owned by Mr. and Mrs. William Fletcher, designed by Fletcher, a Portland architect.

New Plant Topic Of Foods Groups

Comfrey, recently cultivated in this area for the first time, was the topic discussed by Dr. Alfred Fosdal at the last meeting of Natural Foods Associates, held at Medford High school. Dr. Fosdal is now growing a good-sized experimental tract of the plant at his farm in the Griffin Creek district, and has a source of cuttings for local gardeners.

Comfrey is said to be a plant of interest to both the nutritional home gardener and the farmer. It is approximately the size of an artichoke plant, looks more like spinach and like spinach, can be used in salads or cooked "greens" in combination with spinach and beet tops.

Dr. Fosdal stated that the plant has an exceptionally high protein content and offers the organic gardener a prolific source of material for composting and mulching.

Dr. Fosdal obtained his cuttings from Canada. The plant is perennial, grows from cuttings only and thrives in any soil.

Election of officers was held, with Earl W. Rogers elected president of the group for the coming year. Miss Anna Streed is vice-president, Mrs. Edith Davis, secretary and Mrs. L. J. Clay, treasurer.

Registered letters were first accepted by the U.S. postal department in 1855.
