

Wall Street Digging Into Missile Field For Future Growth

By ELMER C. WALZER
United Press Financial Editor
New York — Wall Street elated over the successful firing into orbit of the first United States satellite, is digging into the missile field for clues on the future of this fast growing industry.

Right now the missile industry is a small one as businesses go, but it has had a remarkable growth and the future is for much more growth. The trouble is that the market men see it is that so many companies are involved, and none in the missile business alone.

The U. S. satellite, called the Explorer popularly and the Alpha by scientists, was sent aloft by the Jupiter-C missile which was a combination of Jupiter and Redstone missiles, of which Chrysler Corp. is the prime contractor. The Martin Company's Vanguard is being set up for another try at shooting its satellite.

If that one gets into orbit, the scientists will call it Beta, the second letter of the Greek alphabet. So Wall Street is studying the whole Greek alphabet of 24 letters.

After Gamma comes Delta and then Epsilon, Zeta, Eta, Theta, Iota, Kappa, Lambda, Mu, Nu, Xi, Omicron, Pi, Rho, Sigma, Tau, Upsilon, Phi, Chi, Psi, and Omega. When these are used up there can be an infinite number of combinations.

If the man-made satellites are kept to the Greek alphabet formula, the naming system will be much more consistent than that used for missiles.

These names dig into mythology and many other things. For instance, Jupiter is the top Roman god, the equivalent of the Greek god Zeus. It's also the largest planet.

taking 11 years to revolve around the sun.

Then there are such missiles as Titan, Talos, Nike, Atlas, Hercules, and Ajax, named for Greek mythological persons. There are some other astronomical names in addition to Jupiter such as Polaris (North Star), Regulus and Meteor.

Then there's fiction for Snark (combination of Snail and Shark), Norse mythology for Thor, the god of thunder, and Indian lore for Zuni of the Pueblo tribes of New Mexico.

Then there are birds—Talon, Dove, Sparrow, Blue Goose, Hawk, and Quail; dogs—Bull-pup and Terrier, and such non-classifiable ones as Sidewinder, Bomarc, Dart, Rascal, Honest John, Little John, Ding-Dong, Corporal, and Matador.

Dr. Simeon Hunter of the investment managing firm of Pulsifer and Hunter notes that the missile industry has grown 10,000 per cent from $25 million in 1951 to $2.5 billion in 1958 with prospects this figure will double or triple in the next five years.

Dr. Hunter points out that investing in the space age can be done with any degree of risk which one wishes to assume.

"One can take a flyer in the little company with nothing more than a near radar device said to be capable of tracking Mr. Khrushchev himself," he said.

"Or one can invest in established companies with a strong and stable business outside the rocket-missile industry, but a good chance of building up substantial businesses in that field as well."

"In between there are all sorts of gradations."

"With careful analysis, constant study, and unending watchfulness — plus a little luck — some of us may find the General Motors or the Jersey of the space age."

Three Tracts of Timber Sold at Butte Falls Sale

Three timber tracts, totaling 740,000 board feet of lumber, in Rogue River National Forest were sold at the Butte Falls ranger station this week, according to H. G. Hopkins, timber management staff officer.

Lyle Russell, Butte Falls, was high bidder on 240,000 board feet after 33 oral bids were received. The tract is about 126 acres and is adjacent to Mosquito Grade, 10 miles southeast of Butte Falls.

Russell's bid on the mistletoe infected timber was $20 on Douglas fir, $20.40 on pine and $7.85 on white fir and other timber for a total of $5,580.30. The appraised value to the timber had been set at $4,540 by the forest service.

Other bidders were Louis Biden, Hanscom Brothers, G. and R. Logging, Duane Burton and P. R. Chamberlain.

Second Tract
A and H Logging, Medford, was high bidder on the second tract containing 310,000 board feet near the head of McCoito Grade. Fifty-six oral bids were made on the tract, officials said.

The firm's bid was $33 for Douglas fir, $30 for pine and $18 for white fir and other species for a total of $9,860, compared with the $6,247 forest service appraised value.

Other bidders were Lyle Russell, Louis Biden, G. and H. Logging, Stanley Foley and Mathews and Hanscom brothers.

Duane Burton, Butte Falls, was high bidder on 190,000 board feet in the Buck Point rd. area. His bid was $17.50 for Douglas fir, $32.50 for pine, $18.75 for incense cedar and $9.95 for white fir and other species for a total of $3,138.50. The appraised value was $3,064.50. Other bidders on the tract were Lyle Russell and Hanscom brothers.

Is That So?

Although fantastic claims have been made for the age of some mammals, none can match the extreme proven age of 115 years attained by man. And even with man some fantastic records have and are being claimed almost yearly.

Medical men, however, who have devoted themselves to the study of old age do not give much credibility to reports of people living much beyond 110 years.

Few subjects have been so obscured by deceit and falsehood state the compilers of Superlatives (270 Madison Ave., N. Y.)

The most extreme claims during modern times was for a man of 185 years named Sotrasch Cartien allegedly born near Temeswar, Hungary, in 1837 and alive in 1922 and for a woman 175 years named Louisa Troucou, a South American negress, who died around 1776.

The Research Institute of Biology of the Gorky University, Kharkov, Russia, made the claim on Jan. 17, 1955, that there were at that time 717 people over 110 years living in Russia. . . and of these, Mahmud Evizov of the Azerbaijan village of Perastars, was allegedly born in 1810 giving him an age of 145.

In Scandinavia, there is a claim that Christian Drakenberg who died in 1772 was 145 years old when he died.

Despite these claims, the greatest age which has survived official investigation is 113 years of Pierre Joubert, a French Canadian bootmaker, born in Charlesbourg, Canada, on July 15, 1701 and buried in Quebec on Nov. 18, 1814. This case was investigated and confirmed by Dr. Tache, a government official.

Age Shown At 115
The greatest age for a woman for whom there exists acceptable evidence as to the date of birth is 111 years of the Hon. Katherine Plunket, eldest daughter of the Rev. Thomas (later 2nd Baron) Plunket, who was born in Kilsaran, County Louth, Ireland, on Nov. 22, 1820 and who died at Ballymacanlan House, County Louth, on Oct. 14, 1932.

In November 1948, the General Register Office for England filed a death certificate for Isabella Shephard (died Nov. 20, 1948) showing her age to be 115. If this old, she was born before compulsory registrations of births was required.

128 Years Claimed
In the U. S. there is a claim of 123 years for a Mrs. Belle Heights Rynes who died in Savannah, Georgia, April 15, 1934. Unfortunately documents purporting to show evidence of her date of birth in Dublin, Ireland, were destroyed in a Pittsburgh fire. But there is acceptable evidence that Mrs. Louisa K. Theirs, who died on Feb. 17, 1926 had lived to be 111 years old. Her birth was attested by the Genealogical record office, Washington, D. C.—Oct. 2, 1814.

As for the oldest man in the U. S., Colonel Walter W. Williams of Franklin, Texas, a civil war veteran (born Nov. 14, 1842) surpassed the hitherto greatest age for any human which has survived official investigation — that of the aforementioned Canadian Pierre Joubert.

Next month, we'll discuss the longevity of mammals — an even more elusive subject, surrounded by unfounded claims.

Irrigation Water Supply Average

Portland — Water supplies for Oregon's irrigated lands will be average or better in 1958, according to a report released today by W. T. Frost, snow survey supervisor for the U. S. Department of Agriculture. Soil Conservation Service and Oregon agricultural experiment station.

Statewide snow-cover is much above last year and reservoir water supplies are well above normal, the report said.

Water content of the mountain snow-pack averages 124 per cent of normal compared with 70 per cent of normal last year at this date. Snow cover is generally adequate in amount with many scattered areas having an abundant snowpack. The Hood River-Wasco county area has a 91 per cent snowpack in contrast to the Umatilla-Walla Walla area where the snow is 156 per cent average.

Normally about 65 per cent of the total winter's snow is accumulated by Feb. 1. This year Oregon already has accumulated 78 per cent of the usual winter's total snowpack, Frost's report said.
