Second in Series Of Discussion Club Meetings Set

The second series of Discussion club meetings for the 1957-58 season in Sacred Heart parish will be Sunday at 8 p.m. in the annex of St. Mary's school. This will be a general meeting of all participating members and all other adults who are interested in taking part in the program, but who do not yet belong to a particular group.

The Confraternity of Christian Doctrine, which sponsors this program explains a religious discussion club as a group of six to twelve persons, who meet weekly to discuss the teachings and practices of the church. They clarify and correlate religious information in order to put religious truths into practice in daily living. Each meeting consists of one hour of discussion, followed by a one-hour social period.

Approximately 60 persons attended group meetings during the first series held last fall, and an estimated 100 are expected to participate in the current series. Plans are being made to conclude this series with a general social meeting.

Topics to be considered by the clubs during the next eight weeks are "How Did God Make Us?", "What is Original Sin?", "After Adam, What?", "Can My Soul Die?", "What Are the Roots of Sin?", "Who is Mary?", "Who is Jesus Christ?", and "How Does It End?". The text to be followed is Unit II in "God, Man, and God-Man" by the Rev. Leo J. Trese.

World Spotlights Religious Activities

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press Correspondent

Thousands of Protestant churches across the nation will join Sunday in prayer for a Christian solution of America's racial tensions.

The occasion is the annual observance of "Race Relations Sunday," sponsored by the National Council of Churches.

A special message, to be read from the pulpits of participating churches, emphasizes that Jesus drew no color line when he gave his followers the commandment: "You shall love your neighbor as yourself."

Obedience to this commandment in America today, the message says, means actively supporting "those who seek freedom and justice in the face of discrimination and segregation."

The message suggests four specific ways in which local churches and individual Christians can act to improve race relations:

1. Welcome people of all races into membership in the church and its organizations and make this fact known in the community.

2. Support "constructive" measures for integration of public schools, and firmly oppose any attempt — by legislation or "mob violence" — to circumvent federal law.

3. Cooperate with other community agencies in breaking down racial barriers in housing.

4. Urge elimination of segregation on buses and other transportation facilities.

Hungary's famed Lutheran bishop, Lajos Ordass, is under heavy attack by his country's controlled Communist press. Church leaders of other countries see ominous similarities between the present campaign of vilification and the one which preceded his arrest in 1948 on trumped-up charges of currency manipulation.

Ordass was released in October, 1956, shortly before the Hungarian freedom revolt. After the revolt was crushed by Russian troops, he was ousted from his post as presiding bishop of the Hungarian Lutheran church, but was allowed to remain as head of the church's Southern District.

Ordass has stood aloof from the state-appointed "bishops" who have been imposed on the Hungarian Lutheran church by the Communist government. His name was conspicuously absent from their recent joint declaration recognizing the "divinely ordained supreme authority of the state."

The leader of the world's oldest Protestant sect, the Waldensian church of Italy, is visiting in the United States.

Dr. Achille Deodato, moderator of the Waldensians, came to Washington last week end to speak before several groups which have given financial support to his church, which was founded in the 12th Century and now claims about 26,000 members in Italy.

Deodato said that recent court decisions are helping Italian Protestants to actually exercise the religious freedoms which were promised to them by Italy's post-war constitution. He said it is now possible for Protestants to hold religious meetings in rented halls without notifying police beforehand, or to open their own premises to public worship without requesting authorization.

Protestant and Orthodox churches of the United States will be asked to contribute $10,428,000 in 1958 to support the global programs of relief for the hungry and homeless which they carry on cooperatively through church world service.

Much of the money will come from contributions of individual church members during "one great hour of sharing" on Sunday morning, March 16. Special collections for church world service will be taken up then in thousands of participating local churches.

Church world service distributes food, clothing, medical supplies and other aid directly to needy families in 50 countries.

East German Reds Seek To Weaken Church Influence

By ELLEN LENTZ
United Press Correspondent

Berlin — Communist East Germany has stepped up its campaign to wipe out the strong anti-Communist influence of the church.

The Communists have either absorbed or banned all political parties, all mass organizations, all movements that could oppose them. Only the church remains outside their control.

Throughout East Germany the Communists are now organizing rallies to denounce clergymen who take a firm anti-Communist stand.

They have jailed at least six clergymen and demanded the transfer of others in their stepped-up campaign.

Great pressure is also being placed on the church to support Communist indoctrination of youth.

The Communists are attacking religion in all forms. But the Evangelical Church is bearing the brunt of the assault because more than two-thirds of East Germans are Protestant.

Despite the division of Germany itself between East and West, the Evangelical Church still is a unified body in both parts of the country. Dibelius Target

The Communists are now apparently out to split the church and establish a Communist-dominated Protestant church in East Germany.

A favorite Red target is Bishop Otto Dibelius, titular head of the German Evangelical Church. He still preaches in East Berlin, but since early this year the Communists have barred him from traveling outside the city to East Germany.

The Communists denounce Dibelius as following a "NATO policy," and they have made it clear they want to wipe out his influence in East Germany.

But Dibelius and the church have not been intimidated.

Church leaders at a meeting in East Berlin in December resolved that "not even fear" could drive them to acknowledge a system that denies the existence of God.

They called on the East German faithful "to be ready to make sacrifices for the sake of freedom."

The firm stand taken by the church is expected to aggravate state-church relations.

Pressure exerted by the East regime may take the form of cuts of state subsidies without which the church would be hard-put to survive.

Chaplain Sentenced

A central point of controversy is the "youth dedication service" which Communists are demanding all youths attend in a drive to wipe out religious influence.

Both the Evangelical and the Roman Catholic Church denounce as anti-religious the Communist ceremony in which youths must swear allegiance to Marxism. Youths who take part in the ceremony are banned by the churches from confirmation and holy communion.

Pastor Siegfried Schmutzler 42, Evangelical chaplain at Leipzig University was one of the first victims of the new Communist campaign.

He was sentenced to five years at hard labor on charges of "subversive action" against the East regime. His real sin was his strong influence among Leipzig students.

Whether the Communists will succeed in putting so much pressure on individual pastors in the Soviet zone to make them break away from western church headquarters is still an open question.

Church headquarters in West Berlin do not believe the Communists will succeed. But they admit that clergymen, standing alone in the Soviet zone under heavy duress, are feeling bitter, tired, frustrated and hopeless.
