Truman Article Scheduled Monday

"This is the time for action," writes Former President Harry S. Truman in an important new article on world affairs. "No greater mistake can be made in a dynamic world than to hesitate." The article will appear in Monday's issue of the Mail Tribune.

The American economy—is it healthy at home and abroad? The budget—is it sound from the short-and-long-term views? What of the "human budget" of misery and well-being—are we working to bring it into balance?

These are the vital questions raised, and answered by Mr. Truman in a challenging discussion of our economy by the man whose eight budget programs changed world history.

His evaluation of our strength and weakness in the face of Soviet economic expansion will be followed attentively by thoughtful people everywhere.

South Dakota and Wyoming produce 60 per cent of the United States supply of bentonite, a clay used principally as a bonding material in the molding sand of the steel foundry industry.

The Family Council

Editor's note: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen and a newspaper editor, a women's editor and two writers. Each article is a summary of an actual report. The Family Council does not give advice; it merely reports on problems that have been dealt with by responsible agencies and counselors.

Gertrude F.—Henry is the gloomiest person on earth. Henry F.—Does she have to worry about the bills?

Gertrude F.—My husband and I have been married ten years and have four youngsters. We have had a tough struggle during these years and I never thought much about whether Henry and I were happy or not.

Recently, however, we visited my sister's home for the holidays. She has a young family like ours and they are not much better off financially. But when I saw how considerate her husband was of her, how he helped her and the children, and how happy she looked, I suddenly realized how much I'm missing.

Henry is the gloomiest person on earth. He never cracks a smile and it's gotten so that I don't either. It's just work, work, work and never any happiness.

Henry F.—Gertrude talks about happiness and smiles, but does she have to worry about how to pay the bills? No, she just knows how to pile up bills.

I know men who support families on less than I'm making. They aren't up to their necks in debt. Why? Because their wives know how to economize. Gertrude turns up her nose at "cheap cuts of meat." She says, "My children have to have this and that." She says, "I can't stand shabby clothes and furniture."

I'm not one for making fights, but it really burns me up inside. Gertrude wants me to be considerate of her, but I don't see why all the consideration has to be on my side. Don't I have rights too?

The Council: One reason wives get gray is men like Henry. They insist upon suffering in silence when all they have to do is speak up and something might be done to alleviate the suffering.

Why does Henry insist upon burning up inside and revealing his discomfort only in the lack of smiles, consideration and a pleasant attitude? We have a notion that he wants to suffer—mainly because he is trying to win over his wife's attention and knows no other effective way of doing so.

Gertrude has apparently been so busy with her youngsters that she didn't notice even this heavy-handed appeal until she was able to compare her situation with her sister's.

Well, now the secret is out. Henry is disturbed about money problems. Certainly, this is important and Gertrude must try to work out a satisfactory budget that will enable Henry to enjoy a little peace of mind.

Nevertheless, we think it will take more than this to bring smiles into this home. Both Gertrude and Henry must become deeply concerned about each other's happiness. They should recognize that devotion to children and to a job is praiseworthy, but marital happiness is a foundation for both. Gertrude should be aware that she, as well as Henry, has some responsibility in this matter.

Unemployment in Ohio Community Levelling Off

Lorain, Ohio — Welfare officials of this recession-struck steel town believe the unemployment rate here apparently is levelling off.

Miss Hazel Lewis, claims supervisor of the Bureau of Employment Compensation, said her office had 4,000 continuing claims for aid and 1,650 new claims for unemployment compensation during the week ended Feb. 1.

The first distribution of free bread to the needy here since the 1930s continued on a very small scale. Mrs. Elfrida Thomas, city welfare director, said a second bakery had donated day-old bread and pastry and that today she had supplies for 12 or 14 families. She said her office continued to "call in" representatives of the 175 families on relief here "and we had seven applicants for bread by noon."

Thursday, the first day the free bread program functioned, she had 20 applicants, and supplies for seven families. Only one bakery participated.

The United Press Thursday created the erroneous impression that most of the 175 relief clients here had lined up to receive stale bread, rolls, doughnuts, and coffee cake. Mrs. Thomas said three persons applied in a two-hour period Thursday morning and that 17 others applied in a second two-hour period. "And that hardly constitutes a breadline," she commented.

33 Million Forest Trees Planted

Salem—More than 33,000,000 forest tree seedlings have been planted on 40,377 acres of state owned forest land and 54,472 aerially seeded since Oregon's multi-million dollar forest rehabilitation project got under way on July 1, 1949, according to J. H. Hann, state forestry department official who is in charge of the project.

Hann pointed out that the largest and most important part of the work has been in the rehabilitation of the 350,000-acre Tillamook burn where a pre-planting survey of the 257,000 acres of state owned land has indicated that 113,000 acres was in need of reforestation.

Up to the end of the year 30,000 acres of this area had been planted to 25,129,000 seedlings and 47,565 aerially seeded.

"IMAGINATION RULES THE WORLD"

— (Author's Name Below) —

Scientists first use their imagination to figure out what can be the possible causes of a disease. Then they research each theory until they are positive of their basic facts.

Next, the chemists create a formula, or sometimes even a new man-made chemical, that will accomplish the desired result.

After it has been clinically tested for safe use, the new discovery is sent to our prescription departments. Your physician prescribes it, we pharmacists compound it and another disease can be treated better than ever before.
