Salk Polio Immunization May Lead Other Types of Protection

By DELOS SMITH
United Press Science Editor
New York—A question newly put to America's physicians is: could it be that more children are now immunized against polio with the Salk vaccine, than are immunized against smallpox, diphtheria, tetanus and whooping cough?

The question was put by Dr. Robert A. Gerrick through the American Academy of General Practice. He recalled two features of epidemics of smallpox and diphtheria—quarantines on the homes and the "dead wagon" at midnight.

Then he gave the results of a survey of the children of Fulton county, Ohio. Almost two-thirds had had the Salk vaccine—34.2 per cent hadn't. But 36.9 per cent hadn't had the combined vaccine which immunizes against diphtheria, tetanus and whooping cough and in some 10 per cent more the "booster" shot was overdue. Even more startling, from the viewpoint of rural Fulton county which has a population of 30,000 with 17 schools and 19 physicians, were the results as regards smallpox. All is Not Well.

More than half had had no vaccination, less than one-third were fully protected, and the remainder were overdue for a repeat vaccination. This, said Gerrick who practices in the county, "dramatically emphasizes that all is not well in the field of preventive medicine."

Diphtheria once was the great strangler of children, and smallpox was a great killer of adults and children alike. Immunizations were developed, they were applied on a mass scale and determinedly over several generations, and the diseases have all but disappeared.

Indeed, said Gerrick, there are physicians who have not seen "a single case of smallpox, diphtheria, or tetanus." Which is a good thing, of course, "but in another way, it is a rather sad state of affairs since too many physicians and parents have become complacent in this day of 'wonder drugs.'"

The Reasons

He thought a number of things accounted for there being many "unprotected" persons around—persons unprotected against preventable diseases whose power to kill is enormous but is largely unknown to present Americans. "But the most important reason, he said, was 'lack of public education. Certainly, in any community, there will be those who 'don't believe in shots,' or who feel they cannot afford proper medical care, but these are certainly a small minority."

"It seems that most of the 'unprotected' are from reasonably intelligent families who just do not understand the value of immunizations, or who have forgotten to keep their immunizations up to date." So, let physicians get to work educating these people, he said; no one can explain "the advantage, in fact the necessity, of receiving immunizations and keeping them up to date," better than they.
