The Family Council

Editor's note: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, a newspaper editor, a women's editor and two writers. Each article is a summary of an actual report. The Family Council does not give advice; it merely reports on problems that have been dealt with by responsible agencies and counselors.

Ronald M.—I want to work my way through college.
Mr. L. M.—What a half-baked, Horatio Alger idea!

Ronald M.—I am a 17-year-old boy making plans for starting college in the fall. I am very eager to be independent and I want to work my way through. This would mean I would have to go to a school that is somewhat less expensive than the ones my parents want for me.

My parents keep telling me how they want to give me the best of everything and that I should appreciate it. I have always said they do too much for me and my younger brothers. I want to make my own way in the world. I have figured out how I can meet all my expenses by working over the summers and doing part-time jobs during the school year—but it would have to be at the cheaper school.

Mr. L. M.—Ronald has gotten some half-baked Horatio Alger ideas into his head. He seems to think it's a real big deal to work your way through college.

Well, it happens I did just that—and I know what it means. It means never getting enough rest, not having time for sports and other extra-curricular activities and not having enough time for study. I know I could have done much better at school and perhaps gone further in my career if I didn't have to work.

Ronald has had the good fortune to be accepted in a top-ranking school and I am fortunate enough to be able to send him. Why should he be so stubborn in this hare-brained notion?

The Council: Perhaps Mr. L. M. would be a little more patient with his son if he realized the boy probably wants to emulate him. Possibly Ronald idealizes the father who worked his way through college and became successful in his career and he needs to test himself against this hero-figure.

In this case, Mr. L. M.'s crude disparagement of Ronald's idea probably has a reverse effect. Ronald inevitably feels that his father is pointing out his poor judgment and his inadequacy to meet the challenge he has set himself. This makes it still more important that he prove himself.

Ronald's wish to be self-supporting is commendable and deserves attention. It is not necessary or desirable to crush his ambitions with terms like "half-baked" and "hare-brained." An effort should be made to meet him at least halfway.

If Mr. L. M. feels that the top-ranking school is really so much more desirable than Ronald's choice, he should suggest that the boy plan to meet part of his expenses there. He could offer to give Ronald the rest of the money as a loan, to be paid off when he starts to work. He should point out that many students meet their expenses with loans from the college.

Above all, it is important that Ronald go to the college of his choice in a happy frame of mind. It may be frustrating to his parents to have him spurn the advantages they want to give him, but those advantages would not have a desirable effect if they were forced down Ronald's throat. Integration Suspension at Little Rock Asked

Little Rock, Ark. — The Little Rock School board today sought court permission to suspend integration at Central High school because "defiance" by "a small group" was hampering efforts of both teachers and students.

In a petition filed Thursday in Federal District Court, the board asked the court to stay the execution of its decree issued last year calling for gradual integration of the high school. It also asked the court to define the term "deliberate speed" as applied to school integration.

Since nine Negro students were enrolled at Central High last fall under protection of federal paratroops and federalized National Guardsmen a series of racial incidents occurred, culminating in the expulsion last week of one of the nine, Minnie Jean Brown.

The board and school superintendent Virgil T. Blossom scheduled a hearing today on the suspension last Monday of two white boys accused of following up Minnie Jean's departure by displaying a banner that read—"One down—Eight to go." Blossom, asked by newsmen whether granting of the

Macmillian Wins Confidence Vote

London — Prime Minister Harold Macmillian won an unofficial vote of confidence Thursday night for his efforts to set up a summit conference with adequate advance preparation.

Macmillian won the vote 308 to 242 after a two-day foreign policy debate in the House of Commons. The government avoided an official confidence test by taking the vote on a technical motion to adjourn.

Debate showed the Conservative government and the Labor opposition united in demanding new East-West summit talks. Labor attacked the government for "dragging its heels" in not agreeing to the meeting without further haggling with Moscow over an agenda.

Macmillian told the House in a closing speech that he remains strongly in favor of a summit meeting. But he rebuffed labor demands to name a date at once.
