Mortgage Insurance Plan To Make Buying Easier is Proposed

Washington—(CQ)—A new plan to make it easier to buy a house comes up for Senate discussion next month.

The plan was designed by the U.S. Savings and Loan League, representing savings and loan associations, and bears the endorsement of the National Association of Home Builders and the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

The idea is to encourage bigger home loans by insuring part of the lender's risk, the same principle that underlies the FHA and GI home loan programs. But instead of having Federal insurance, the League would set up a special corporation using private money.

Currently, home loans without Government backing range between 60 and 70 per cent of what the house is actually worth. This leaves it up to the home buyer to scrape up a down payment of 40 to 30 per cent—often an insurmountable obstacle.

More Insurance

The special corporation would provide insurance for most of the top 20 per cent of these so-called conventional loans. So the lender could write a bigger mortgage without any additional risk to himself.

To get started, the loan insurance corporation would use savings and loan association money held by the 11 District Home Loan Banks. To get the insurance, lenders outside of the Home Loan Bank System would have to buy stock in the corporation equal to one-seventh of 1 per cent of the mortgages they owned or serviced. These stock purchases, plus premiums for the loan insurance, would give the corporation money to work with as the program grew.

Specifically, the corporation would insure 90 per cent of the top 20 per cent of the home loan. On a $10,000 loan, the lender's risk would therefore be reduced to $8,200.

The League says the plan would be especially helpful in outlying areas where lenders are too small to handle FHA or GI loans. FHA and GI loans entail a tremendous amount of red-tape, and many lenders, especially savings and loan associations, just do not have the staff to handle them.

Doubts Voiced

But several members of the home loan community have their doubts about the League plan. Harry Held, vice president of the Bowery Savings Bank in New York and chairman of the mortgage committee of the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks, says the stock purchase requirement ruins the plan for most of the association's members. Held says since his own bank holds more than $1 billion worth of mortgages, it would have to buy more than $1 million worth of stock to qualify for the loan insurance.

The Mortgage Bankers association objects to the stock purchase requirement and also to a provision that says to get in on the insurance program the lender must have a net worth of 1 per cent of the mortgages he owns or handles. Samuel E. Neel, MBA general counsel, said this would rule out many of the members of his association.

Though the mutual savings bank and mortgage bankers associations have objections to the League plan, they see it as a help to one segment of the home lending business and therefore do not oppose it. Not so the AFL-CIO. The labor Federation terms the League plan a "tremendous step backward," claiming it would give no protection whatever to the home buyer. The AFL-CIO objects to the lack of interest ceilings, appraisal procedures and minimum property and construction requirements which are part of the FHA and GI home loans programs.

Open to Revision

Stephen G. Slipper, League vice president, said his organization's plan is open to revision—especially in the line of stock purchase requirements. But he said the AFL-CIO objections ignore the fact that conventional loans have been going on successfully for years without the interest ceilings and other requirements of Government housing programs.

Chairman John J. Sparkman (D-Ala.) of the Senate Housing Subcommittee plans to air the League proposal early in March. His counterpart on the House side, Rep. Albert Rains (D-Ala.) currently is seeking reaction to the League plan and is expected to hold hearings on it after the Senate does.

Victor Allen Dallaire, 21, of 1060 Crater Lake ave., is reported in good condition by Rogue Valley hospital authorities this morning after the motor scooter he was operating collided with a dog about 12:55 p.m. Sunday.

Police said Dallaire attempted to miss the dog but failed. The vehicle fell on top of him, they said. He suffered concussion, cuts, bruises and shock.

The dog apparently ran across Valley View dr., between Ruhl Way and East Main st., into the path of the motor scooter, they said. Dallaire was taken to the hospital by Medford Ambulance service.

Plane Cuts Power In Arlington Area

Pendleton — A crop-spraying plane ran into a power line Sunday causing an outage of 69,000 volts and interrupting electric service briefly in the lone, Arlington, Hepper and Jordan areas.

The pilot, John Merrill, about 33, Pendleton, was not hurt, and damage to the plane was slight.

Cubans Kidnap Racing Champion

Havana, Cuba — Cuban rebels kidnaped Argentine auto racer Juan Manuel Fangio at gunpoint Sunday night in a daring raid aimed at embarrassing the government of President Fulgencio Batista.

Fangio, five times world auto racing champion, was marched out of a crowded lobby in a downtown hotel by two gunmen while his bodyguard and friends looked on helplessly. He was hustled into a jeep which raced off into the darkness.

Fangio's life was not believed in danger. The rebel underground had threatened to spoil Cuba's greatest sports event—today's $10,000 Grand Prix—but was not believed prepared to go so far as to harm Fangio.

Immediately after the kidnapping police set up roadblocks at all the main inter-sections and mounted special guards at all private and commercial airports. Guards also were assigned to all other foreign drivers competing in the race.

Flowers from Area Sent to TV Show

Ashland—A selection of 16 different types of flowers and blossoms from early flowering trees in Ashland have been sent to Arthur Godfrey in New York.

They were sent over the week end with the hope he would use them on his television show at 2:30 p.m. today.

The idea of sending the flowers originated with Clarence Bell, president of the Ashland Chamber of Commerce, after Godfrey commented about severe winter weather in the east.

He contacted local garden club and television station officials. Godfrey's west coast representative also was contacted, and was reported to be encouraged with the idea.

Jack Williams of the Ashland Flower shop and greenhouse prepared the flowers, which were sent by air Saturday. There was no guarantee, however, that Godfrey would use the flowers on his show.

D'Autremont Pleads Guilty

ments and be sentenced to life in the state penitentiary.

Hugh had not been sentenced at that time. It was explained to the trio that under ordinary circumstances, a person sentenced to life imprisonment in Oregon would be eligible for release consideration after about 7½ years.

At that time the D'Autremonts agreed that they would spend the rest of their natural lives in the penitentiary and that the remaining outstanding indictments against them would not be prosecuted.

Kept Pending

The indictments would be kept pending to assure that each of the three men would spend the rest of his life in the penitentiary and thus not be eligible for parole consideration. The agreement was presented to the Jackson County circuit court and approved by Judge C. M. Thomas upon the oral motion of Newton Chaney, then district attorney.

According to officials, Roy D'Autremont has become criminally insane and is now in the Oregon state mental hospital, and Ray D'Autremont has not been regarded by officials as socially suitable for release. Hugh, who created and edited the prison newspaper, "Shadows," has been considered by parole officers to be rehabilitated.

According to Reeder, D'Autremont's pleas to two of the outstanding indictments and the dismissal of the three other indictments removes all of the outstanding indictments against him in Jackson County. Reeder explained that there were still several federal indictments pending against D'Autremont.

Stock List Declines On Reduced Volume

New York—Stocks declined in reduced volume today with chemicals and some individual issues weak.

Chrysler lost more than a point to a new low and other motors eased small amounts. Several oils, including Cities Service and Gulf, made new lows. A group of specials lost a point or more and an equally large group showed gains of that amount.

The market ignored a dividend cut by National Steel, having discounted it last week. It paid no attention either to a favorable earnings report by Socony Mobil. Lorillard firm when its president said 1957 was a record breaking year for the company. Steels firmed on a small rise slated for steel output.
