

First of Brownlee Generators Set Up

Brownlee, Ore. — Installation of the first of four 90,000 kilowatt turbines at Idaho Power Company's Brownlee dam on the Snake river was announced Wednesday by company officials.

A company spokesman said the turbine installation was being pushed on a round-the-clock schedule to have the generating unit ready for operation by August, the deadline for Brownlee's first operation. The dam's initial capacity is 360,000 kilowatts of power.

Idaho Power also announced that the entire project was now 80 per cent complete. Construction of the dam's rock-fill embankment is virtually finished, the company said.
