Metals, Chemicals Pace Market Lower

New York — Stocks were lower again today, with individual losses running to more than three points at the lows.

Metals and chemicals paced the market lower, although losses predominated in most major groups.

Excessive inventories and a weakening price structure helped to touch off the selling in the metal group. National Lead, which cut the price of that metal today, lost around a point. Aluminum issues declined fractionally.

The steels gave ground as the market reacted to another decline in production. Youngstown was the big loser in this group, off more than two points at its low.

Olin Mathieson dropped more than a point and touched a new low. Dow and Eastman Kodak were soft spots, but DuPont rose fractionally.
