

The Family Council

Editor's note: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, a newspaper editor, a women's editor and two writers. Each article is a summary of an actual report. The Family Council does not give advice; it merely reports on problems that have been dealt with by responsible agencies and counselors.

Mrs. C. F. — My daughter has taken the children from me.

Constance F. — I am trying to make it up to her.

Mrs. C. F. — My problem concerns the happy relationship that I have just lost with my grandchildren.

They are four darlings and I adore being with them. Recently, however, my daughter moved to a new community and since then I have only seen them a couple of times.

There was really no reason for my daughter to have made this move. She had a lovely home, convenient to her husband's office, right near me. My daughter has always been irritable and short-tempered with me and I feel that she resented the fact the children were so crazy about me.

It is heartbreaking that such bitterness should exist in a child's heart toward her own mother. My life is now empty. What have I done to deserve this?

Constance F. — My mother has always been the possessive type. I have been telling her this for years, but she just doesn't seem to understand.

Of course I love my mother and I don't resent the children's love for her, but I do think they could use a little less of her. I can't help seeing that they prefer her story-telling and gift-giving to my scrubbing, feeding and occasional spanking.

In spite of this I have felt quite guilty about taking the children away from my mother when she dotes on them so. She says she has seen them only a couple of times since we have moved away, but she neglects to mention that those couple of times she stayed at my home several days and saw the children constantly. I am trying to make it up to her.

The Council: This unhappy situation cannot be remedied by anything Constance can do "to make it up" to her mother. Her guilt is ill-founded.

The real problem here is not being fully stated. Mrs. C.F. has obviously invested too much of herself in these grandchildren. It will be very hard for her to face and accept the fact that they should occupy only a portion of her life and that she must invest her time, energy and interest in other places.

Women who have fully devoted themselves to family life for some 25 years naturally feel that the world outside home and family has little interest for them. It is not until they begin to participate in that world a little bit that they realize they can have other interests. That is why it is important to start developing outside interests and activities while the children are still young.

It takes courage to enter a new phase of life and Mrs. C.F. should realize that she has shirked the problem until now. Her plaintive cry, "What have I done to deserve this?" indicates that she is heading down the dangerous path of self-pity to avoid tackling her very real problem.

Constance can do better than punish herself with guilty feelings about her mother. She can show her love by helping her mother find clubs or community work.

Deepfreeze Units In Touch With Reds

San Francisco — Rear Adm. George Dufek, Commander of Operation Deepfreeze, said Saturday that Russian and American outposts in the Antarctic are in constant radio touch with each other.

Dufek, who arrived at Pearl Harbor Thursday night after closing his New Zealand headquarters for the winter, said that although the Russians were always at least 500 miles from American bases "we were in constant radio communication and exchanged scientific data freely."

Portland, Ore. — Pettie, blonde Mrs. Polly Sue Steffens of Portland Saturday was named as Mrs. Oregon of 1958.

One Battery Gone In U.S. Vanguard

Naval Research laboratory said Saturday "indications are" that the chemical batteries in the Satellite Vanguard are "exhausted."

The solar batteries in the six-inch satellite, however, still are functioning. A laboratory spokesman said the solar batteries may function five to 10 years.

The laboratory said the Havana Minitrack station failed to receive a signal from the chemically-powered 108 megacycle transmitter when the Vanguard made a pass at about 8:30 p.m. (EST).

Earlier, the laboratory said the South America Minitrack station received a "very weak" signal from the chemically-powered transmitter
