

Potpourri

One wedding ceremony didn't satisfy Sallee Joan Buffington and Andre Pierre Proudian. The pair, married properly and with becoming dignity last Sunday evening at St. Peter Evangelical Lutheran church, later re-enacted the ceremony, along with all the attendants. This was done so that the bridegroom's parents, who live in Cairo, Egypt, might have the movies which were made during the second event.

After the rites, the couple cut the wedding cake, received the felicitations of their relatives and friends and then returned to the sanctuary. The Rev. Kenneth Korby donned his robes again, the bride, her father and the attendants went down the aisle and the ceremony was held again while the movie camera recorded it all.

The interesting young bridegroom, born in Egypt of Armenian parents, is enrolled at Fresno State college, and according to newspaper stories printed in a Fresno paper, carries the heaviest study load in the school's history and makes almost straight A grades. The last time he enrolled it was for 35 units, more than twice the normal number students undertake. The course includes seven upper division physics courses—his major is nuclear physics—and in addition to all this Andre tutors other students in order to help defray his college expenses.

His other courses are mathematics, speech, social science, philosophy and German. He already speaks English, Arabian, Armenian and French. Andre expects to be graduated in June, having telescoped his junior and senior years.

Potpourri had luncheon with Sallee and Andre one noon, and found the young man friendly, unassuming and with a sense of humor. He wants to do further study—in Europe if possible and eventually to become an American citizen, a dream he has had since boyhood. Speaking of Egypt, he said that Egypt does not make citizenship readily available to people of other nationalities and that since he was of Armenian descent, being born in Egypt did not make him a citizen of that country.

Questioned about the political views of his father and friends in Egypt, he said that many Egyptians pay almost no attention to politics and that a strong man, like Nasser, is able to stay in power with little more than the backing of the army.

Sallee and Andre were a composed bridal couple—neither displayed any nervousness and both seemed to enjoy the ceremony and reception. When we complimented Sallee on her little crown of pearls, Andre quickly said she had made it herself and because she had dived so over the task, he had wagered her father $100 that she would not finish it in time for the wedding. Losing did not concern him much, however, for he admitted readily that he didn't have an extra $100.

The bride's aunt, Mrs. George Broussard, came up from Fresno for the wedding and made the bride's cake, elaborately decorated with fragile little frosting flowers and other finery. The entire top was removed and boxed to send home with the couple to share with friends and classmates at college.

The society editor wished afterward that she had remembered to ask Andre if wedding ceremonies in his church, the Eastern Orthodox, were very different from that of St. Peter Evangelical Lutheran. Before the luncheon we consulted the encyclopedia about Armenia and discovered that the Armenians were among the first nationalities to adopt Christianity.

Maybe it was President Eisenhower's advice, or more likely it was just because Spring, with a capital S, seized us. Anyhow while on the way to work Saturday morning Potpourri just decided that the daily routine at the newsroom could wait a bit; we threw on the brakes, popped into a store and bought three rose bushes. When pappy reads this he'll groan and wonder where to put them. Potpourri knows just the spot—in the triangle out by the west driveway along with the three lilacs from Hanleylands.

As we recall, the President said "buy anything you need." Well, we don't really need any new roses. But the old ones are really very old, and besides, there wasn't a single floribunda in the garden, which is something a gardener should be ashamed to admit. Potpourri had a hard time resisting the three little colored chicks which the clerk who sold us the roses said were left over from Easter. But we're sure neither President Eisenhower or pappy would have approved.

A mysterious message came to our desk not long ago which said be prepared for a "Storknik." It was followed yesterday by some adult recipes for baby foods packaged in glass and the notation that "baby food has come of age, and that grownups don't know what they're missing when they label baby food "for infants only."

A postscript said that the latest message from Storknik was "Still in orbit. Just passed Sputnik. Dog will never replace baby."

It's far out, Mr. Cherneff—very far out.—O.S.

Fancy Wigs Newest Fad

BY GAY PAULEY
United Press Women's Editor
New York — Around Manhattan:

Wigs, once as unmentionable as falsies, are fashion's newest fad. A woman bored with her own locks can go redheaded, pale blonde, deep brunette, or a couple of dozen other hues for $150 and up. She can select a wig to match her fur coat or dress. Or, if she wants to be really daring, buy a lid in pale green, lavender, pale blue, or two tone pink.

One wig-maker is planning to come out with "budget" wigs, priced at $80 each, "so every secretary can own one." This business of women, and men, wearing coiffures not their own has been around many years, but wig-makers mostly were concerned with covers for therapeutic or theatrical uses.

Then along came a Hubert de Givenchy fashion show in Paris. The designer—to show some evening clothes—put his models in fancy wigs fashioned by the Carita Sisters, well-known hair-dressers. And the fad was under way.

We're so rushed we're figuratively tearing our hair," said Doris Fleisher, who with her brother Paul, runs the 128-year-old firm of Joseph Fleisher, Inc. "We've had orders from society women, from a lot of show business people.

Scholarship Announced

A tuberculosis nursing scholarship for $1,000 is available for nurses to secure advanced preparation for positions in tuberculosis control hospitals, clinics, or health departments. The scholarship was established by Eight and Forty and is administered by the American Legion Education and scholarship committee.

To be eligible for the scholarship the nurse must be a graduate of an accredited school of nursing, have two years experience in tuberculosis nursing with a desire to continue in that field or be a student already enrolled in a graduate program on a part-time basis who wishes to continue studies on a full-time basis. The applicant must be accepted by an accredited school of nursing which will enable the applicant to fulfill the purpose of the scholarship award.

Awards will be made on the basis of personal and academic qualifications with consideration being given to past experience and future employment plans. The nurse must be between the ages of 23 to 45.

A check for $500 will be mailed to the recipient following enrollment in the course with the balance being sent at the time of enrollment for the second period, it is stated.

All interested persons are asked to contact Mrs. Clark Walker, 3322 Lone Pine road, Spring 3-4720.

New Foods Now Come Frozen

By GAY PAULEY
United Press Women's Editor
New York — Around Manhattan:

A segment of the frozen foods industry next week will give a look at the latest in gastronomic labor-savers.

About 30 companies, members of the Eastern Frozen Foods association, will display everything from soup to, well, to desserts.

Frank J. Cogan, spokesman for Effa, said new products will include "about 50 hors d'oeuvres, several entrees packed in plastic pouches and ready to heat in boiling water, and even a warm-and-serve coconut custard pie."

Three-Way Mix
"There's a new hot turkey sandwich, a new cream pumpkin pie, a lot of new fruit juice combination. One company's mixed up three—orange, pineapple and grapefruit," said Cogan.

"New appetizers include a combination buckwheat and potato tidbit. And seems like everybody's freezing pizzas." Cogan said the association was opening its convention on a cheerful business note.

"Most of the companies report sales up, some say as much as 20 per cent from last year," he said. "The specialty foods are doing exceedingly well."

Anatomy Of The Menu
Another mouth-watering (?) note comes from the Mystery Writers of America, Inc., which will hold its annual awards dinner April 25 in Manhattan. The "Anatomy of the Menu" came across my desk this week.

It includes fresh fruit cup, Sicilian olives mafia, Maximed celery with silencer, clammed-up chowder, roast stuffed chicken macabre, drawn and quartered, steak frisked and grilled, stout sweet potatoes a la rex, delinquent young peas, paris green salad with hard-boiled dressing, ice cold lady-fingers, with raven frosting, and caffeine sulphate to finish off the meal.

FOX COMES BACK
Newington, Conn. — Joseph Buchas reported that his pet fox, valued at $200, was stolen from his backyard during the night, despite a sturdy chain. A day later he reported that the animal was home again, held by the same chain and in the same place from which it was taken.
