The Medical Roundup

by Walter Alvarez, Emeritus Consultant in Medicine, Mayo Clinic, Emeritus Professor of Medicine, Mayo Foundation

Fear In an unusual book on Fear, written in 1931 by that able psychiatrist, Dr. John Rathbone Oliver, he says, so wisely, that normally our consciousness is lowered and, with this, we can feel the functioning of our organs, and can be distressed over this. We can feel the beating of our heart and the motions of our bowels.
