

Safety Features Should Be Standard In Autos

Detroit, Mich. — Gov. Abraham Ribicoff, chairman of the Governor's Special Committee for Highway Safety, Saturday ended the committee's three-day auto industry visit as convinced as ever that the companies should be putting safety features in more cars.

But the Connecticut governor got little backing from the other three governors on hand for the visit. Govs. Milward L. Simpson of Wyoming and Robert B. Meyner of New Jersey both said the auto companies might be ahead of the states in promoting safety equipment and ideas.

Gov. G. Mennen Williams of Michigan suggested the industry and the governor's conference keep in closer contact on safety promotion and ideas in the future.

At the Chrysler laboratories, the governors were shown how special testing machines and equipment are used to prove every part of the car safe, durable and excellent in performance.

The companies tried to prove to the governors that the industry seeks, develops and adds new features constantly.

But Ribicoff still stated his belief the companies are putting unneeded "frills" on cars as standard equipment when they should be making padded dashboards and seat belts standard equipment.

Colbert said Ford and Chrysler both spend big sums advertising seat belts and other safety items in 1956, but it didn't sell cars. He said others in the industry, and dealers, thought safety ads hurt sales.

Bids Scheduled For Lights Work

Bids will be received and opened by the State Highway Commission in Salem April 17 for a traffic signal and illumination project in Medford.

The bids are part of those called for 18 projects in the state calling for paving and other road improvements, bridge construction and repair, and crushed materials production.

The Medford project involves installation of seven traffic signals on the new Eighth st. couple carrying east bound traffic through Medford, the revision of seven traffic signals on Main st., and the addition of two new traffic signals on Main st.

It is a cooperative state and city project and is scheduled for completion in late summer, according to the highway department.

Outlook Given on Major Legislation Pending in Congress

Washington — The outlook for major legislation facing Congress during the rest of its 1958 session:

Tax Reduction: At least a few excise cuts seem assured; general reduction of income and excise taxes probable unless the business situation improves by June.

Defense: Rugged struggle in prospect over administration proposals for reorganizing the Pentagon; Congress probably will approve a defense budget as big or bigger than the administration asked.

Foreign Aid: A substantial deduction expected in the administration's $4 billion program.

Reciprocal Trade: Congress probably will renew the program but stop short of the administration request for a five-year extension with authority to cut tariffs an additional 25 per cent.

Farm: Presidential veto will stand on stopgap bill to freeze farm price supports; an effort will be made to write new long range farm legislation.

Unemployment: After disputes over detail, a bill probably will pass to provide additional benefits to unemployed who have exhausted their payments under existing state programs.

Burning Permits Now Required

The State Forestry department announced today burning permits will be required for incinerators located within one-eighth of a mile of forest land, as defined by law, during the closed fire season, which started April 1.

This in addition to burning permit requirements on open debris burning, which is required each season and is now in effect.

The burning permit requirements on incinerators is the result of several serious fires last year from faulty constructed and unsafe devices of this nature.

Burning permits for incinerators and open debris burning may be obtained at the Forestry headquarters on Table Rock Rd. Grants Pass Forestry headquarters or from any state fire warden.

Cuban Rebels Back In Own Homes Now

Brownsville, Tex. — Sixteen of the 35 Cuban revolutionaries arrested off the Texas coast two weeks ago have returned to their families in New York after being released on bond.

The group boarded an Eastern Airlines flight for New York Friday night with their leader, Arnaldo Barron, who headed the seven-day hunger strike the men staged in protest of their arrest.

A U. S. Coast Guard cutter rammed the would-be Rebels' freighter loaded with arms early in the morning of March 27 as they steamed out into the Gulf. The men said they hoped to join Cuban rebel leader Fidel Castro.

When arrested, they were wearing U. S. Army fatigues and arm bands, reading "July 26."

Greensburg, Ind. — The town carefully excavated and removed from inside its courthouse tower a tree that had grown too big. Citizens missed it so much they promptly planted another, slightly smaller.
