

Boredom Enemy of Youth Says Famous Movie Actress

New York — "Boredom is the enemy of youth. The woman who gets bored gets old very soon," says one of the screen's great beauties of all-time.

Delores Del Rio apparently never had time for tedium. The Mexican actress who began her career in Hollywood 33 years ago — when movies were still silents — has changed little from the days she was a top box office attraction as a glamour girl.

"I think staying young depends a lot on your mental attitude," she said. "I'm never bored, I love life too much. I have never the time to sit. Good skin from within."

"I don't drink. I don't smoke, and I don't diet. I do eat properly. I think that physically you are what you eat. A good skin comes from within."

The woman with the classic Latin beauty was busy with a lunch of fresh fruit salad, cottage cheese and a glass of milk as we talked.

Miss Del Rio, who is of medium height, said her figure hadn't altered through the years. "I weigh 125 pounds," she said. "For a Latin woman, that is slender. For you in the States, it is quite a great deal."

The actress is in New York for her first live dramatic performance on television — in CBS' "U. S. Steel Hour," April 23.

It will be one of the few times American audiences have seen the actress since she quit Hollywood 14 years ago, disgusted "because they wouldn't let me act."

Her first movie hit was the silent, "What Price Glory?" "It was a good thing it was silent," she laughingly observed today. "I couldn't speak a word of English when I hit Hollywood." She had a long string of starring roles, many of them in musicals, and left filmland at the peak of her career.

Unable To Act
"I loved the place, and the people," she said. "I have many friends there. But as an actress, I had to get out."

"The day arrived when the important thing was that I have 20 or 25 changes of costumes in one picture. My last one, 'Journey Into Fear,' was the last straw."

"I've not stopped making pictures," she said. "I just moved my work south of the border, and I have been able to do all the dramatic parts I wanted. The pictures don't have much distribution in the States, but they go all over Europe and South America."

"Here Today," a contemporary comedy chosen by Medford for its spring production, opens tonight at the Fairgrounds theater. Curtain time is 8:30 p.m. and tickets are available at the box office.

Trouser Costume Made for Travel

A harem trouser costume combines glamour and comfort for travel. The outfit, by Vera Maxwell, comes in three pieces: trousers draped like a skirt, a blouse, and a linen coat lined in the Orlon and cotton paisley print of the set. Without the coat, it can be worn as an at-home dinner outfit.

New York designer Sophie puts patterned scarves on spring coats and suits. One suit of yellow Pesante has a bias scarf of yellow and grey taffeta. Dotted chiffon scarves fill in standaway necklines of coats.

A new twist to accessories for men—matching cuff links and ties. Jaguar Accessories shows the sets, which come in a variety of colors and designs.

Longer gloves are the rule for women who wear a chemise. The extra length is needed to balance the silhouette, especially if the dress is sleeveless. Look for gloves in full eight-button lengths in citrus shades.

Paris milliners have come up with a new idea for hat veiling. They add a two-inch edging of organdy, dyed to match the hat.

Look where earrings are turning up now—in the hair. The latest fad has women clipping an earring to a silver or gold-coated bobby pin and tucking into the hair.

The Hudson river was given its name in 1674. Before that it had been named the San Antonio river and the Mauritius river.

BUDAPEST ADDRESS—Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev addresses a huge crowd in Budapest, Hungary, as he helps mark the 13th anniversary of the liberating of the city from the Nazis by the Red Army. Khrushchev, on his first trip abroad since taking over the Kremlin reins, warned the Hungarian Communists that they should not expect Soviet military aid in the event of another "counter-revolution."

Coffee Gives Way

Geneva, N.Y. — An "apple break" has replaced the coffee break at the New York State Agricultural Experiment Station here.

Under the unique plan, a different apple variety is displayed daily in the laboratory of the station's pomology department where personnel have been accustomed to drop in for a brief coffee break.

The offerings include not only standard varieties, but new introductions from the station's fruit-breeding program and even old varieties no longer grown commercially.

The object of the apple break in addition to its health-promoting aspects is to familiarize members of the pomology department with the merits and characteristics of different apple varieties," said a department spokesman.

The nation's fruit specialists can carry on the apple breaks for some time.
