The Saints' Club. Differences in religion often place an invisible barrier between people. I recently heard of a group that promoted social friendliness without infringing on the beliefs of any member.

In a small neighboring community, a Roman Catholic priest and several Protestant ministers got together for coffee every weekday morning in the corner drugstore. Local residents unofficially nicknamed them the Saints' Club.

Later, when the priest was killed in an automobile accident, the other members of the club served as pallbearers.—Allan Johnson, Pueblo, Colo.

Life Begins Any Time. When my husband found that his age was becoming a handicap in getting a job, we decided on a back-to-the-country movement for two.

The sale of our furniture made a down payment on a used, modern 25-foot house trailer, and the difference between trailer-park rental and apartment rental made the payments. We worked at various jobs until the trailer was paid for, then we went looking for a place to take root.

We found many spots outside big cities where workers of all kinds are in demand and age is no handicap, and finally located in Lake County, Calif. We have a garden, flowers, a boat for fishing, and a healthy, happy life.—Mrs. Mary Landis, Clearlake Highlands, Calif.

City of Samaritans. Recently, on a return trip from New York, I planned to stop in Dayton, O., to visit my daughter and her family.

When I arrived at the airport, a friendly porter showed me how to dial their suburban telephone number. No answer. The operator spent 20 minutes checking, then found they had moved but their new number wasn't connected yet.

Discouraged and a little ill, I made ready to return to Iowa. Then the ticket agent took over. He assured me my daughter could be located some way. Finally, we learned she had moved to a new subdivision. The porter hailed a cab, and we set out to find it.

We drove over hills, through woods and country roads, and there it was—3,500 new homes, and no street names or house numbers! We drove blindly up one street and down another, but the driver wouldn't give up. Then, by sheer chance, I spotted my daughter's car.

I'm still warmed by the memory of all those strangers doing so much to help a tired old lady.—Mrs. B. C., Northwood, Iowa.

One girl replied, "It's no fun working for you. You never tell us when we do anything good."—Russell A. Schwejda, Director of Music, Casper College, Casper, Wyo.
