Princess Margaret On Trinidad Tour

Port of Spain, Trinidad — (UP) — Britain's Princess Margaret toured this capital of the newest nation in the British Commonwealth today. On Tuesday she will open the first West Indian Federation legislature.

Margaret flew here Sunday on her second visit to the Caribbean island, formerly a British colony.

Nearly 4,000 Trinidadians gathered at the airport 17 miles from the city to greet the Princess' special Britannia airliner. Lord Hailes, governor general of the West Indian Federation, and Sir Edward Beetham, governor of Trinidad, headed the welcoming group.

Margaret will visit British Guiana, Jamaica, British Honduras and Nassau before returning to Britain May 7.

Six Collegians Hurt in Wreck

La Grande — (UP) — Six baseball players from Lewis and Clark college were hospitalized here Sunday with injuries received when their car went out of control on rain-slickened highway 82 and rolled over three times down an embankment.

The players were en route to Walla Walla, Wash., for a game with Whitman today when the accident occurred.

Most seriously hurt was Dick Stevens of Milwaukie who suffered a head laceration which required several stitches. Attendants at Grand Ronde hospital here reported him in satisfactory condition, however.

The other five suffered cuts and bruises and were admitted for "observation." They were Earl Chappell, Ed Davidson and Larry Wilkins, all of Portland; Bill Acker, Oregon City, and Herman Jones, Vancouver, Wash.

State police said the accident occurred near the community of Imbler about 25 miles north of La Grande about 5:30 p.m. Sunday.

"Eskimo" is derived from an Indian word meaning "eaters of raw meat."

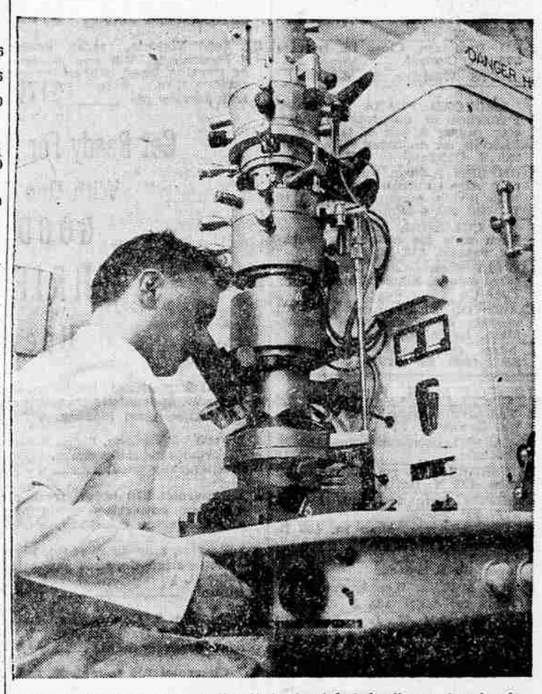
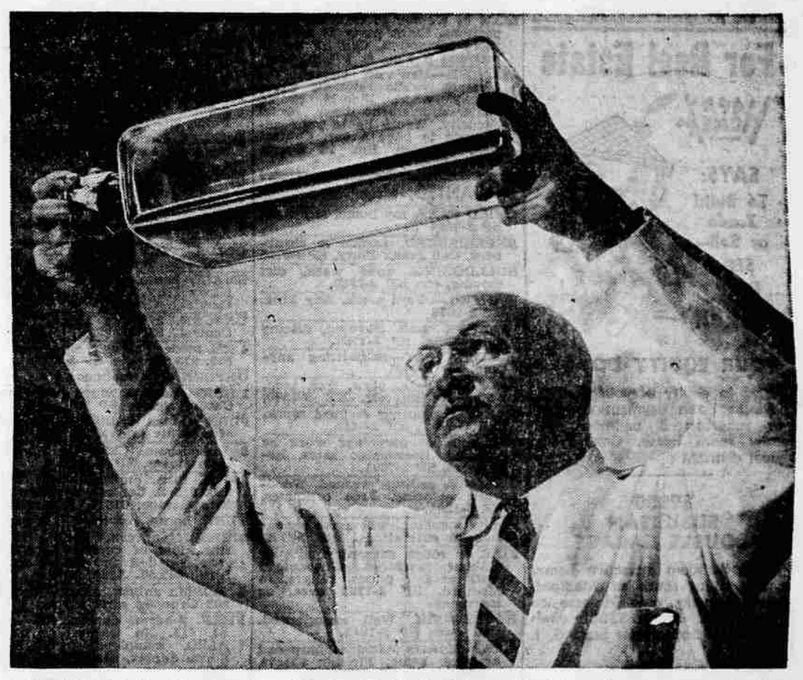
DO VIRUSES CAUSE CANCER?



At the Rockefeller Institute in New York, virus-infected cells are viewed under the electron microscope which magnifies a virus particle one million times.



At the biochemical Virus Laboratory of the University of California, Dr. Wendell M. Stanley, Nobel prize winner in chemistry holds a culture bottle containing more than 10 million living cells, the growth medium of viruses.

At the M. D. Anderson Hospital in Houston, Texas, a scientist studies pictures of cell structure. These are enlargements of original photographs taken inside the electron microscope and show great detail.

Dr. William R. Adams of Yale University examines tissue from chick embryos inoculated with viruses, which have produced small infected areas.

The word "virus" has become part of the everyday language of the 20th Century. So minute that some of them can barely be seen under high-powered electron microscopes, these tiny particles are responsible for diseases like polio and smallpox and more common ailments such as Asiatic flu and the common cold. Scientists today are making significant research investigations seeking an answer to an awesome question: Do viruses cause cancer?

According to the American Cancer Society, which today is supporting thirty-five research projects in the study of viruses and diseases caused by them, if proof should ever be obtained that cancer is virus-caused, the body's natural resistance might be stimulated to produce antibodies which would combat the cancer viruses... the way the body fights the viruses of the common cold, measles and other diseases.

Scientists have known for years that some forms of cancer in chickens, rabbits and mice are caused by viruses. Learning how a virus induces these cancers, isolating the villain-virus, and moving the accumulated knowledge from experimental animal to man . . . these are the challenging goals of the nation's virologists.

Will the problem of cancer surrender to a vaccine which can be used to prevent the disease? The answer lies in the future . . . and in the laboratories throughout the country.

Readying virus particles centrifuged from blood plasma for counting under the electron microscope, this Duke University scientist transfers to a thin plastic membrane particles which have clung to a jelly-like substance in a test-tube.

Technicians at the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University work with tissue cultures, in a sterile room. Human and animal cells are kept alive and growing in glass containers, for study at close range.
