

Klamath Film Shown By Chamber

A movie featuring recreational facilities and potential industrial development in the Klamath Falls area was shown at the Monday noon chamber of commerce roundtable by Ed Brotherhood, assistant manager for the Klamath Falls chamber of commerce.

The movie "Wish You Were Here," was designed for television and filmed in black and white. He said the movie had been shown in several southern communities and has been booked as far east as Indiana.

The movie features a couple on vacation and lists several activities they take part in while on the vacation. All local talent was used in the production, according to Brotherhood.

He said the film cost the chamber about $1,500 to make. This does not include Brotherhood's time, he noted. The chamber has eight prints of the sound film in addition to their master negative and master positive copies.
