

Eisenhower Declares Russians Indulging in Over-Statements

The President said it would make just as much sense to say that Congress might suddenly go nuts and abolish the whole Defense Department as to say that the individual services ever would be stripped. He said it just was not possible if we are sensible people.

—He said that the Russians had been indulging in a lot of over-statement in their charges that U. S. H-bombers were making provocative flights in the direction of Russia. He said all there was to it was that in times like this the bombers had to be gotten off vulnerable fields as a defensive measure when there is a possible alert. But he added that once they are off they have to get orders before carrying out any attack.

Russian Moves Puzzling

—He labelled Russian moves involving a possible summit conference as being really puzzling. He said that he could see no good coming from a summit conference just between himself and Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev. He said that all he could see that would result would be division between this nation and its allies.

—He said he had no information to indicate that Russian submarines have been conducting any reconnaissance campaign off U. S.

—He seemed surprised that GOP National Chairman Meade Alcorn had said that it didn't seem to be in the cards that the Republicans could win control of the Senate this fall. He said that Alcorn, just before he made such a statement to reporters at the White House Tuesday, had been most enthusiastic and encouraging when he had talked to the chief executive. Anyway, the President said that he had never conceded defeat in advance.

The President became obviously angry four times.

Becomes Red-Faced

He flushed and became red-faced when a reporter brought up the charges of congressional opponents of the administration defense reorganization plan. He first snapped back a question: Had the reporter read the law, apparently meaning the administration legislation. The reporter said he had read it. The President shot back, "No you haven't." The President, in sharp, clipped words then defended the plan.

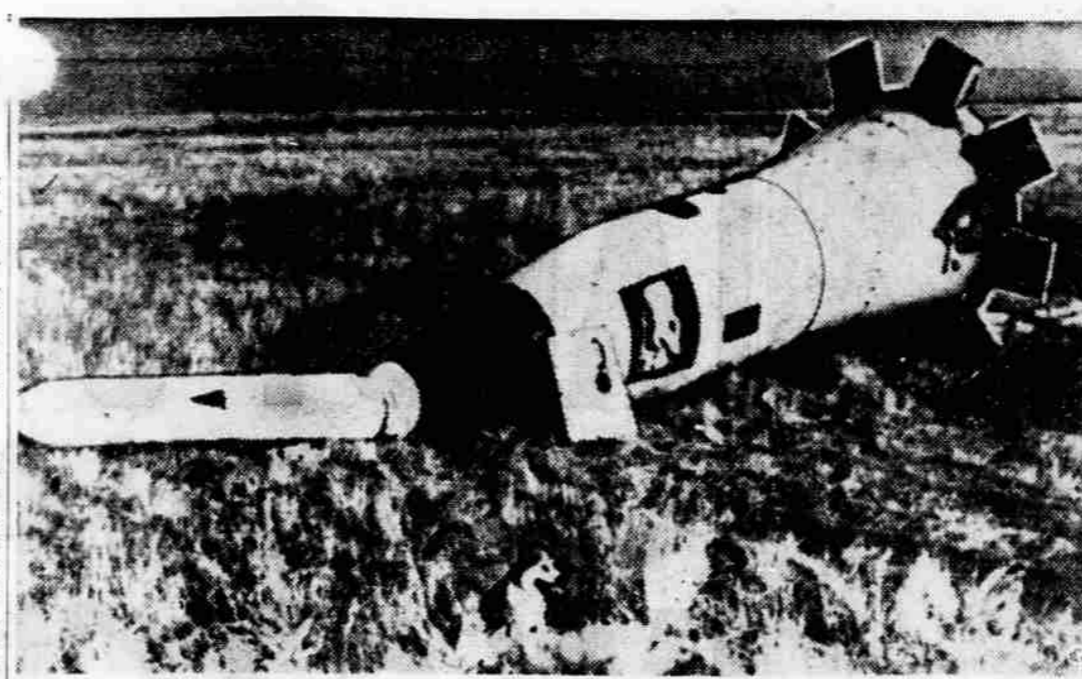

Another reporter asked what the President had been buying, in following his advice to people to buy wisely to help end the recession. He brusquely said that the reporter would have to ask his aide.

The President was asked if he cared to comment on Democratic charges that the U. S. armed forces would be fighting in China now if Democrats had not restrained GOP interventionists in 1953. He replied with a grumpy no and turned to recognize another reporter.

Quizzed on Jobless Pay

The President was asked how he would answer congressional charges that his emergency unemployment compensation program was discriminatory because it did not provide for any payments to uninsured idle workers. The President replied by sharply asking the reporter if the original unemployment compensation law was discriminatory. The reporter said the President's question probably should be directed to congressmen. Then Eisenhower shot back that he thought the reporter indicated that he knew something about it.

The President said that he had recommended several months ago that the unemployment compensation program be liberalized and extended to many workers not now covered. But he said to do it on the basis proposed by the Democrats would destroy the present insurance system and amount simply to a dole and nothing else. He did not think that would be good.

Humphrey Remarks Steady Market List

New York — An optimistic statement by former Secretary of the Treasury George M. Humphrey today set off a rise in steel shares and steadied the whole stock market after an irregular decline most of the session.

Humphrey, speaking at the annual meeting of National Steel Corp., of which he is chairman, said the nation's economy is coasting along at what seems to be the bottom and the next move should be upward.

Demand for the steels followed with Youngstown Sheet & Tube leading the upturn, rising more than two points. Lukens rose more than a point. The leaders turned small losses into gains.

High Meat Price Blame Placed

Denver — The executive secretary of the American National Cattlemen's association said Tuesday current meat prices are the result of "a temporary dislocation in normal marketing patterns."

In addition, said Radford S. Hall of Denver, the actual cost in terms of work done for meat "is far less than at any other time in history."

Hall said cattlemen caused a temporary shortage of meat last fall after drought-breaking rains promised abundant feed to enable them to restock their depleted herds.

Hall predicted generous beef supplies, which should produce lower prices, through the summer.

Hall added government statistics show fewer minutes of working time are needed to buy a pound of beef now than ever before.

Tornadoes Strike In South Carolina

Columbia, S. C. — Tornadoes struck in at least four places in South Carolina Tuesday, killing one person but doing relatively little damage.

A report said 5-year-old Willie Edward Carter was killed by debris from a building destroyed by a tornado north of Summerton, S. C. The boy's sister was seriously hurt.

Langley Petition Denied by Court

Salem — The Oregon Supreme Court today denied former Multnomah County District Attorney William Langley's petition for rehearing of his case.

On March 19 the high court affirmed Langley's conviction for failure to prosecute a gambling game.

He was removed from office and fined $100 on the charge.

Box Top, Coin Bring Ribbons for Flowers

Upton, Mass. — Four years ago, factory worker Alexander Croteau sent box-top and coin to one of the popular daytime radio programs for a package of 25 gladiola bulbs.

Today, Croteau has no fewer than 75,000 gladiola bulbs in his garden.

So far this year he has won 65 ribbons by displaying his flowers at shows throughout Massachusetts.

Rhode Island Town Wants Resident Doctor

Block Island, R. I. — Want a $15,000-a-year job? That's what a physician should be able to earn here, according to an estimate by town officials.

The town has been looking for a resident doctor since mid-November when Dr. Gregory M. Burble left to set up practice on the mainland.

Besides the estimated $15,000 a year, the Block Island doctor would have a 16-room home rent-free for six months and $75 a month thereafter.

Prospect Couple Hurt in Accident

Mrs. Aleene Williams, 30, Prospect, was reported in poor condition today, following a one-car accident at about 10:45 p.m. yesterday south of Prospect on Highway 62.

Her husband, Gene Williams, 30, a passenger in the car which she was driving, was reported in fair condition. Mrs. Williams is reported to be suffering from deep shock and head injuries, and her husband from a dislocated hip. Both were taken to the Rogue Valley hospital by Medford Ambulance service.

State police said the car apparently was eastbound on Highway 62, made a left turn, went off onto the shoulder and skidded across the highway, hit a bank and was knocked back on the highway facing west on the east-bound lane. Both occupants were thrown from the car when it hit the bank, officers said. According to the marks left on the highway, the car skidded 244 feet before it hit the bank and 61 feet after it hit the bank.

The state police said they are continuing their investigation.
