

Luxury Spa Run For Teeners

By GAY PAULEY
United Press Women's Editor
New York — Florida now boasts a "junior Maine Chance" for teen-age fatties. The luxury spa is run by a 47-year-old businessman named Larry Paskow, who said the resort grew from necessity. His own daughter, Patricia, had been fat throughout childhood.

"Summer camp didn't help her any," said Paskow. "Patricia's come home 10 pounds heavier each year. Finally my wife and I decided we'd look for a camp or health farm which catered to overweight teenagers. There wasn't one, so we opened our own."

Daughter Was 'Fatty'
Patricia, now 16, was one of 22 "fatties" who participated in the eight-week program on an experimental basis last summer.

"Every one of the girls, but one, went home 10, 15, and even more pounds slimmer," said Paskow during an interview here. "Patricia's now a trim 126 pounds, down from 154. Of course, not all of that melted off in the eight weeks."

"The idea is to teach the youngsters proper eating habits, actually to re-train their food preferences, and hope they'll keep up the good work once they get home."

"We've kept in touch with each of our girls through the winter. We're mighty proud of Janey Hawkins, a farm girl from Casey, Ill. Janey came to the spa weighing 212 pounds. She left at 155, and now writes that she has settled down to 114."

"All but one girl stuck it out last summer," said Paskow. "We had to send her home early. She would sneak away for an afternoon and gorge. After two or three such incidents, we knew for the morale of the others, she would have to go."

100 Girls Enroll
Pashow's Harbor Island spa is located at Miami Beach. In winter, it caters to adults who want to lose a few pounds, or else just get a good rest. This summer, the teenagers again will take over — 100 girls, 14 to 19 years old, enrolled at $890 a head.

"They're hardly roughing it," said Paskow. "Each room is air-conditioned with private bath and shower. It's sort of a junior Maine Chance." The reference was to the Arizona health resort visited earlier this year by Mamie Eisenhower.

The daily program at Harbor Island includes spot reducing, steam room, massage and calisthenics, plus lessons in makeup, hair-styling, style, speech, dancing, manners and various outdoor sports — water skiing, golf, tennis and swimming.

Play Cast Announced At College

Ashland — Many parents today use Dr. Spock's "Baby Care" as a guide to the rearing of children, but Patrick Flannigan in the "Loud Red Patrick" brings his daughters up according to Robert's Rules of Order. "Loud Red Patrick" is the spring quarter play to be given May 9 and 10 at Southern Oregon college.

Family decisions in the Flannigan family are made by calling the family council to order. Members of the council, the Flannigan family, Patrick and his daughters Maggie, Rosalie, and Rita alternate as chairman. Each member of the council votes according to age, one vote for each year. If the girls vote together, they can control the council, a fact which Father Flannigan well knows, when they vote for the most important issue to be brought before the group, the subject of Maggie's marriage. Much of the action of the play centers about the resolution of Maggie's problem.

Other characters in the play are: Francis Finnegan, a whimsical ex-vaudeville, a Flannigan housekeeper who has little to say about the upbringing of the Flannigan daughters; Ralph Penrose, the suitor for Maggie's hand, and Richard, another young man.

Peter Lungren, veteran of a number of SOC Players productions, plays the role of Flannigan. Barbara Cox and Kathryn Stewart, who played sisters in last quarter's "Cinderella" cast, play two of the Flannigan daughters. Laura Hedge and Charlotte Riley make their debuts as the other two daughters. Ron Lapp, another newcomer to the SOC stage, makes his first appearance as Finnegan.

Louise Hedge as the housekeeper and Jan Gilhouse as the suitor, Ralph Penrose, have played in one-act plays at SOC, and Dale Flowers, Richard in this cast, appeared in "The Caine Mutiny Court-Martial" last fall.

Dr. Dorothy Stolp is directing the production. Assistants to the director are Nellieann Roesberry and Glenna Breward. Francis Fann is the stage manager.

Kennedy's Oregon Visit Postponed

This new "chemise cloche" has a high upswept crown. Fashioned of orange Panamalec, it is trimmed with matching satin and worn at the new off-face pose.

Hats Accent New Chemise

The peak of the dashing, casually-chic chemise costume for spring is the upswept hat that focuses attention on your face. The high, off-face roundness of the roller-bretton and the full-blown chemise cloche make a perfect balance of the tapering, narrow lines of the costume.

In a season of colorful clothes, the bright-colored hat is more "basic" than black. As the high point of a figure-skipping suit or dress of neutral beige or grey, try a blazing brightness of straw in orange, red or yellow. Subtly lighten the violet color of a spring suit with a blouse and hat of shadowed red, blue or yellow trim laced with white.

Punctuate a narrow coat of navy wool with a soaring turban of dotted silk or a fez of fragile silk anemones shading from violet to pink.

The tall-crowned cloche with the narrow brim is only vaguely reminiscent of the one worn by Clara Bow. With its headband resting high on the hairline, the 1958 chemise cloche shows rather than smoothes the face. But its high, lofty look harmonizes attractively with soft, subtly-shaped modern versions of the chemise dress.

Easily-waisted, loose-fitting suits take neatly to snug, off-face cloches, rolled-back brettons and high, native-inspired turbans. Coats and tailleurs with controlled fullness toward the back need the balance of a forward-reaching brim, arched high bonnet-fashion or abbreviated at the back by a folded-up Watteau brim.

Attractive, important-looking hats are demanded by the understated new clothes of spring 1958. And for the woman whose legs are less than long-stemmed "American beauties," flattering, face-framing hats have become a necessity.

'Marriage' Nerves? Try This
The Smith marriage wages a running battle, with skirmishes ranging from arguments over uncapped toothpaste to overdue payments on the mortgage. Mrs. Smith complains that her husband doesn't love her any more because he criticizes her cooking, spends unnecessary evenings at the office, and refuses to let her see the bank book. Mr. Smith accuses his wife of losing interest in him because she keeps him awake at night with recitals of her ailments, reverses his discipline with the children, and belittles his work.

Tensions mount higher and higher, while the home becomes a battle ground and the children lose all sense of security and direction. With a divorce threatening, they come to a marriage counselor who helps them gain perspective on their problems and plan a rebuilding program. What he suggests can apply in general to any marriage:

1. Keep your discussions pleasant. Learn to distinguish between argument and peaceful discussion. When you find the situation becoming too charged with emotion, your perspective warping out of line with reality, or your self-control slipping — cool off! Say nothing until you can be constructive.

2. Try to give your mate a sense of security, of belonging. Women respond to encouragement and praise. Men appreciate warmth, admiration, and respect. Express these ego-builders at least once a day — consciously, if need be, and sincerely. Make praise a habit.

3. Attempt to gain mutual adjustment and satisfaction in every area of marriage relations. Physical maladjustment

Truman Lectures On Presidents In New York State

Albany — Former President Truman, carrying a brand new sheepskin, headed for an inspection tour of the St. Lawrence Seaway Saturday.

The Democratic former chief executive lectured a capacity audience of 1,500 Friday night in his folksy best on one of his favorite subjects — the U.S. presidency — as he received an honorary degree of doctor of laws from the New York State Board of Regents.

Truman advanced the theory that the history of the presidency had been one of great chief executives followed by the "not so great."

Franklin D. Roosevelt was a great president, Truman said, "and the great Roosevelt was followed by me and the present occupant of the White House."

Others on the Truman list of "great" presidents included Washington, Jefferson, Jackson, Polk, Lincoln, Cleveland, Theodore Roosevelt and Wilson.

A degree in absentia for former President Hoover, who is recuperating from surgery, was accepted by a son, Allan Hoover.
