17 Will Divide Alaska Ice Pool

Nenana, Alaska — The tripod in the Tanana river here was swept away by ice at 2:56 p.m. (p.s.t.) Tuesday and 17 persons and groups who had guessed the time of the breakup will divide a pool of $104,500.

The breakup was described as the most freakish in history owing to the absence of high water in the river.

The tripod toppled over and laid on its side for more than an hour before it tightened the wire sufficiently to pull the pin and stop the clock.

Don Clark, manager of the ice classic, said the winnings would be distributed by check on June 1.
