Annual Weekend Set at College

Ashland—"Bouquets for Mother" is the theme for Mothers' Weekend, May 10 annually sponsored by the Associated Women Students. The general chairman is Miss Darlene Trahern, AWS vice president. Assisting her are Miss Sue Main, invitations; Miss Judy Schopf, luncheon; Miss Virginia Ferguson, program assembly; Miss Elaine Tenney, Ashland, program.

Luncheon reservations are in charge of Miss Marie Belaschi, Portland; the style show, Miss Balba Snow; publicity, Miss Marjorie Samples, Lakeview; Miss Barbara Cox, Medford; and Miss Wilma Bensch, Talent. Men's chairmen are George Trahern and Jack Main of Ashland.

The robes will be in charge of registration. Eight hundred invitations have been sent out to the mothers and fathers of Southern Oregon college students.

Studio Observes Its Second Year in Valley

The Ceasar Muzzioli school of accordion, 517 Newtown st., Medford, is observing its second year of operation in southern Oregon.

Muzzioli has studios in Eagle Point and Grants Pass, as well as Medford. The Grants Pass studio was opened last year.

Muzzioli started playing the accordion when he was five, studying accordion under Pietro Delrio in New York, Salvatore Gulizia in Boston and Frank Gavianni. He was featured in Shep Fields "Rippling Rhythm" orchestra, and toured the country, Canada and Mexico in concerts. He also was featured on coast-to-coast television shows prior to coming to Medford.

Dinner

The Eagles membership dinner will be held at the Eagles hall, Friday, May 2, at 6:30 p.m. All members are invited to attend.

Potpourri

"Our big tour of Europe is over" wrote the Army wife in her last letter, and from there went on for several pages, the longest letter, in fact, since her arrival in Berlin. The two had left Berlin March 20, and spent a three weeks leave traveling.

We left Berlin Thursday on the military train, and arrived in Frankfurt early Friday morning. We had a couple of hours before our train left, so we had breakfast at an EES snack bar across the street from the Hauptbahnhof.

Our train for Heidelberg left shortly after 8, and we arrived there about 9:30. Kenny knew his way around a little from having been there last June, so we had no trouble finding things. We found a room in a pension, and spent the rest of the day walking around taking pictures. (Our pictures are all developed except for the last roll, which still has three to go on it, and they turned out very well.)

The next day we went on to Munchen, and took a room in a small hotel near the Hauptbahnhof. It was recommended in the guidebook we bought just before leaving Berlin, which tells "How to See Europe on $5 a Day." (It can be done, too!) We didn't do a lot of sightseeing in Munchen, because it was snowing, but we did take a few pictures. For dinner that night we had chateaubriand at the Ratskeller. The price of the meal, including wine, was 16 DM, or just under $4. (Ratskeller is the named used for a restaurant found in the basement of the local courthouse. The food served in Ratskellers is usually very good, because it is a city showplace, and the city officials eat there.) Then we went on to the Munchener Hofbrauhaus, which is the largest beer hall in Europe. It covers a block and is four stories tall.

The atmosphere is a very casual one, but, like most German beer halls, quite respectable. The people were very friendly, and we had quite a conversation with those at our table. Each table holds about 10 people, and the place was packed early in the evening. There was a small Bavarian orchestra which played drinking songs, including one which was written for the Hofbrauhaus and is sung all over Germany.

We left for Salzburg the next morning on the eastbound Orient Express. (Sorry, no spies.) Salzburg was the only place where we indulged in a room with bath, and we had a very nice one for less than $4.

In Salzburg we climbed up the hill to the fortress which overlooks the town, and also visited the Mozart Museum, located in the apartment where Mozart was born. The museum contains family portraits, original manuscripts, family jewelry, letters, and some of the instruments which Mozart owned during his lifetime. A plaque on the wall indicates the corner where his cradle is said to have stood.

On the train to Innsbruck the next day we saw a good deal of the famed Alpine scenery, and we went through several mountain tunnels, one of which runs almost the whole distance between two small towns. We took some pictures through the train window, which turned out quite well. Innsbruck is surrounded by tall mountains, but the town itself didn't impress us much. I think perhaps we were there at the wrong time of year.

The train to Zurich the next day was very crowded, and we were fortunate to find seats. Most second class carriages in Europe put eight people to a compartment, and the compartment was full a good part of the journey. It turned out that a young man in the compartment spoke English, and so we talked to him during most of the trip. He was a French medical student returning to Paris from a skiing holiday in Austria, and he and Kenny became quite good friends. They exchanged pipe tobacco, and eventually got into a game of chess, which the Frenchman won.

We didn't stop in Zurich, but got right on a train for Luzern, about an hour's ride from Zurich. Of the countries we saw, Switzerland was obviously the most prosperous. One can sense in the very atmosphere that there have been no wars in Switzerland for many years. Although there is a definite effort made to preserve the medieval style of the old cities, the outskirts are full of modern buildings.

We found Luzern to be a very charming place, and ended up staying an extra day. The town is built on both sides of the river which empties out of Lake Luzern, and there are several bridges, both ancient and modern, spanning the water. And the water is covered with swans and saucy little black ducks with white heads. If Bill Patton wants a swan for Lithia park, he should write to Luzern. They even had a few black swans, some imported ducks, and something called a Singeschwan (aren't trumpeter swans extinct?) in large cages built in the water.

Kenny and I spent a good part of our time window shopping, and were astounded at the number of watch stores. I have never seen so many different styles of watches in my life. Watches in cigarette lighters, on rings, on cuff links, made up as lockets; in fact, just about anything you can imagine can be found in the way of a watch. One store fea-

Mystery Model Highlights Show

"A 'mystery model' will again be the highlight of the annual Kiwanian Dames style show and luncheon, Monday, May 5, at 12:30 p.m. at the Rogue Valley Country club. This feature is always one of the most interesting parts of the show.

The show, to feature "Fashions out of this World," will be followed by an afternoon of cards.

For reservations contact the Rogue Valley Country club at Spring 2-5965 prior to Friday noon.

Faculty Members Attend Meeting Of SOC Alumni

Ashland—Six Southern Oregon College staff members attended the annual crab feed and business meeting of Gamma chapter of the SOC alumni association in Charleston Saturday evening.

Mrs. Margaret Mabie, Myrtle Point, was elected president, succeeding Deleene Metzger, Bandon. Andy Castillo, North Bend, was elected vice president, and Mrs. LaVerne Thiess, Coos Bay, secretary-treasurer. Retiring from these positions were Jim Kennett, Bandon, and Mrs. Cherie Mae Buoy, Bandon, respectively.

Dr. Elmo N. Stevenson, SOC president, addressed the group on the expansion of the college and the increasing recognition gained throughout the United States by its alumni and faculty.

Dr. Richard H. Byrns, associate professor of English, and Hugh G. Simpson, director of alumni affairs, also spoke.

Other faculty members attending were A. L. Siebenlist, assistant professor of mathematics; Arnold D. Wolfe, assistant professor of business education; and F. J. Kelly, psychology instructor.

Swingin' Pairs To Hold Dance

The Swingin' Pairs Square Dance will hold a dance at Square Corral near Camp White Saturday, May 3, at 8:30 p.m. Douglas Fosburg and several guests will call. Potluck refreshments will be served.

All square dancers are invited to attend.

tures a clock set into the wall between two windows which tells the time in any part of the world, and this same store also had a sundial clock set up just outside the entrance which was calibrated to be extremely accurate.

We spent the next two days in Bern, the capital of Switzerland. Of all the places I saw, Bern is the one I would like to visit again. As in other parts of Switzerland, it is a combination of old and new, with the newer buildings going up mostly in the suburbs. There is a large modern department store about two blocks from the Parliament buildings which reminded us of B. Altman in New York. There were more things we both wanted to buy and couldn't, than in any other city we visited. One of the interesting things we noticed about Bern is that, like Berlin, the bear is the city symbol. But Bern has gone Berlin one better, in that they have a special bear pit housing several bears which is completely separate from the zoo. We watched them one morning, and they are awful hams. They dance, climb a tree, play with a barrel, and lie down and wave their feet in the air (just like Tippy) in order to get food from the spectators. As at the Bronx Zoo, special food is prepared for them and sold to the people who want to feed them so that they will not eat things which are not good for them.

We noticed, too, that Bern has many museums, libraries and archives. Until we reached Switzerland, we kept our expenses down to less than $10 a day by carrying bread, cheese, salami and wine in the AWOL bag and declining to eat in the restaurant cars on the trains. And even in Switzerland, where we ate all our meals in restaurants, our living expenses were not much higher. I have a fairly accurate record of what we spent on the trip, although when we got to Paris and I came down with a cold, my good resolutions fell by the wayside and I have to figure our expenses from the amount of money we put into the currency of each country.—O.S.

Council Luncheon Set Friday

The program to be presented by Medford United Council of Church Women at the annual May Fellowship luncheon, Friday, May 2, is centered about the theme, "A Place to Live." It will feature a panel discussion on "Council on the Aging," which is a topic of special interest now. Mrs. Frank Fairweather is to act as moderator for the panel.

Luncheon is to be served promptly at 12 o'clock in the First Presbyterian church dining room. It is announced by the co-chairmen, Mrs. Samuel Earhart and Mrs. Glenn Harrison. Mothers of small children are reminded that children are to be left at the Methodist church nursery at 11:30 a.m.

The program, which follows the luncheon, is to be presented in the church sanctuary.

An important feature of the day will be the presentation of an outstanding woman chosen from each church for her active participation in church and community work over a long period of years. It is stated that those chosen must be over 65 years of age. Mrs. E. Ronald Rice is chairman of this portion of the program. She asks that those in charge of choosing names to be presented notify her as soon as possible.

Music will be furnished by Medford High school choir, directed by Lynn Sojold and the Rev. W. Lee Mansfield will sing a solo number. Miss Helene Robinson will be at the organ.

Miss Verna Cingcade, Bible teacher in the schools, will tell of her work and the interest and progress being made in the work. Officers of the council state that the larger portion of the proceeds from ticket sales go to assist in Miss Cingcade's work.

Mrs. D. K. West will speak on the topic "Our Needs." Ministers assisting in devotions will be the Rev. Clynton Crisman and the Rev. Melvin Dixon.

Woodcraft Neighbors Plan Session Tonight

Phoenix — Phoenix Neighbors of Woodcraft will meet tonight at 8 o'clock at the Grange hall for a business session. Refreshments will be served after the meeting.

Phoenix Thimble club will meet Friday, May 2 at the home of Mrs. Delbert Cook, 304 Colver road for a covered dish luncheon and business meeting.

Students Of McLoughlin To Give Operetta Friday

One of the most colorful productions ever attempted by the McLoughlin Junior High school vocal music department will be presented Friday evening, May 2, when the curtain goes up on "Bell of Bagdad."

The plot revolves around a TV talent scout's search for a certain belle in Bagdad, and is complicated by an assassin with a bomb in a camera. Visiting Americans and members of the caliph's court are the characters in the story.

This two act musical is beautifully costumed and screened, the school reports, and cast turn is said to turn in a performance far superior to expectations for their age group.

Direction, costuming, and scenery have been supervised by Ray Lewis and Don Darnelle. Students having leading roles in the production are Mary Frohmayer, Mary Kay Harris, Linda Joe Waltermire, Bob Quinney, Roberta Willett, Nancy Hinman, Chuck Holt, Dick Ragsdale, Sharon Huffman, Sara Hunkle, Jackson Phillips, Bill Rupp, DeAnne Taylor, and Mike Hood.

Two choruses provide musical background and support the solo parts. Instrumental accompaniment is done by two pianos, organ and drums, played by Melody Pierce, Ray Lewis, Margaret Brown and Robert Anderson. Some of the most outstanding production numbers are a combination of dancing with choral and instrumental music. The public is invited to attend this operetta, which will be given in the McLoughlin gymnasium. Curtain time is 8:00 p.m., and tickets will be on sale at the door.

Group to Attend BPWC Convention

Seven members and officers of the Medford Business and Professional Women's club will attend the state convention of the club at Gearhart, Ore., May 2 through 4. Convention theme will be "Expanding Horizons."

Local members attending include Miss Voda Brower, president; Mrs. Harriet Watson, southern Oregon district chairman; Miss Laura York, past state president; Mrs. Jean Mast, president-elect; Mrs. Ellen Lynner, and Miss Lucille Lenox.

When children clamor for something to do, dress them in one of dad's old shirts, buttoned on backwards, and let them play "artist," says the American Home Laundry Manufacturers' association. The pretend "smock" keeps small-fry clean, and watercolor or paint spots quickly disappear in your washer.

Top each serving of heated green beans with a small spoonful of herb mayonnaise. Stir a little dill, rosemary or your favorite herb into mayonnaise and add a squeeze of fresh lime or lemon juice.

Rankins To Mark 25th Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Lionel G. Rankin, 842 Taylor street, are to observe their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary with open house the afternoon of Sunday, May 4. Friends are invited to call during the hours of two to six o'clock.

Mrs. Rankin, formerly Miss Bernice Chapman, and Mr. Rankin were married May 1, 1933 in Martin, S. D., and in August, 1935, came to Medford where they have made their home since that time. They have a son, Richard, who is a senior at Medford High school.

The Rankins are active members of First Methodist church where Mrs. Rankin heads the Woman's Society of Christian Service as president.

Relatives expected from a distance include Mrs. Rankin's sister, and husband, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Berner, of Yakima, Wash., who are to arrive today. Mrs. Berner will act as hostess for the open house.

Coming from Yakima on May 3 will be Mrs. Rankin's father, Harry Chapman; her brother and wife, Mr. and Mrs. John Chapman and their daughter, Frances.

A dinner has been planned for relatives and close friends for Saturday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Kent on South Oakdale avenue.

Assisting Mrs. Berner on Sunday will be Mrs. John Kent, Mrs. A. O. Walker, Mrs. Tom Tibbetts and Mrs. W. B. Hickman.
