By GENE BRYANT

Two well-pitched games high-lighted Pacific Coast league play Thursday night but an afternoon of fence-busting at Salt Lake City went against the trend as the Bees erupted for 19 hits and the same number of runs to bury Vancouver, 19-5.

Bud Watkins had a no-hitter going for seven and two-thirds innings at Sacramento where the Solons won their first home game of the season, defeating Portland 2-0. At San Diego, Dom Zanni of Phoenix allowed the Padres only five hits as the Giants evened the series with another 2-0 victory. Seattle edged Spokane, 5-4, to take a 2-1 series lead over the Indians.

Portland Leads League

Thursday night's action left Portland in first place, a half-game in front of Vancouver, but the league tightened up enough to leave last-place Sacramento only two games off the pace.

Salt Lake made up for the general lack of hitting as the Bees collected their second victory over the Mounties in two days. Vancouver had beaten Salt Lake five straight times before Wednesday's defeat and the disaster yesterday.

Willie Melendez and Jim McDaniel, who now has hit six for six in the past two games, homered for the winners. McDaniel had two homers in Wednesday's win.

Don Kildoo picked up the victory after replacing starter Joe Trimble, who departed in the third because of a knee injury. The Bees had amassed a 12-man lead when Kildoo made his appearance.

Watkins Has Three Hit Game

Bob Borkowski singled to left with two out in the seventh to spoil Watkins' no-hitter for Sacramento. Portland could manage only two more safeties off Watkins as the Solon pitcher picked up the first shutout of the year for the winners.

Starter John Buzhardt of Portland also pitched well before being taken out for a pinch-hitter in the eighth. He was charged with the loss.

At San Diego, Zanni was in control throughout, using an
