

Nixon Seen Willing To Seek Presidency

La Paz, Bolivia—Vice President Richard M. Nixon has indicated he would be willing to run for President in 1960 if it appears that the time is right.

"I have a theory that in the United States those who seek the presidency seldom win it," Nixon said at a U.S. Embassy lunch here. "This is one office in which circumstances rather than a man's ambition determine the result."

"If he is the right man for the right time, he will be chosen... He must be willing, as Eisenhower was, if it happens to be his time to run."

Nixon is in La Paz on a goodwill tour of South American countries.
