Holmes Seeks Votes In Eastern Oregon

Baker — Gov. Robert D. Holmes says his administration is one that cares about the welfare of the people and dares to face up to its problems.

Gov. Holmes made a campaign swing through Eastern Oregon Wednesday. He spoke in Pendleton in the morning, in La Grande in the afternoon and at Baker Wednesday night. He seeks the Democratic nomination for reelection.

For the first time in two decades, the governor said, Oregon has a dedicated administration in every department working for the good of all the people.

Truman Plans Normal Day on Birthday

Independence, Mo. — Former President Harry Truman planned a "normal working day" today on his 74th birthday.

After the usual early morning stroll, the schedule included an "ordinary load of work" plus a lunch with a group of friends at the Hotel Muehlebach in Kansas City.

The former Chief Executive planned to return to his office at the Truman Library in Independence later in the day.

The Medical Roundup

by Walter Alvarez

Emeritus Consultant in Medicine, Mayo Clinic
Emeritus Professor of Medicine, Mayo Foundation

A Tendency To Bleed

Many persons ask me what to do about profuse bleeding. Perhaps they have bled severely and for too long a time after the removal of a tooth. Some women bleed too heavily with each menses, and occasionally the physician wonders if this can be due to something wrong with the blood rather than with the womb. Many women wonder why they get so many black and blue spots under the skin when they cannot remember having bumped themselves anywhere. When I get concerned about such troubles in a patient I turn him or her over to an expert in diseases of the blood. I am not conversant enough with this field of medicine to give much advice in it. The specialist (hematologist) will have available a laboratory in which a number of tests can be made to see if there is anything wrong with the clotting mechanism of the blood, and, if so, what exactly is wrong and what it means. The clotting mechanism is a very complicated one, and one that can fail at a number of places in the chain of chemical processes. Sometimes, when the diagnosis is made, something can be done about the situation.

The parents of a boy who had inherited hemophilia (the dread bleeding disease that wrecked the lives of some sons of the last king of Spain) really ought quickly to move to some city in which perhaps there is a medical school, and in it a teacher of hematology. Then, suddenly one day, the lad starts to bleed terribly, there will be someone around who knows the last word about the disease and what can be done to help.

Fever Convulsions

I recently read an article by Dr. M. G. Peterman, of Milwaukee, who answers the question that so many anxious mothers ask, which is, "Will the small child who now goes into convulsions when he has fever have epilepsy later in life?" Dr. Peterman says that 74 per cent of these children have an abnormal electroencephalogram which suggests that there is something wrong with the brain, and often this abnormality is of epileptic type. Other neurologists have gathered statistics which show that more than half of the children who have convulsions in childhood tend to have convulsions later.

Dr. Peterman points out that the children most likely to have trouble later are those who have a prolonged convulsion, which lasts over half an hour, or those who have what is called a focal convulsion, in which only an arm or a leg twitches. The outlook is particularly bad when there is a family history of convulsions or other troubles suggesting a poor nervous inheritance.

Dr. Peterman says one can get an epileptic type of a history in almost half the cases. In my experience, in another quarter of the cases one can get a history of mental trouble, or a terrible temper, or mental retardation. Children who go on having short seizures should be given some of the powerful anticonvulsant drugs. A very important point is that the parents should not try to hide the child away from doctors and everyone; they should quickly face the facts of this disease, just as they would face the facts of any other disease.

Dermatomyositis

Many unhappy people write asking if there is any hope for a person with dermatomyositis. All I can say is, see a good physician who will perhaps work with a skin specialist. I recently read an interesting article on the subject by Drs. L. L. Hoaglin, Jr., G. Hal Demay, W. B. Moody, and J. R. Schenken. As they say, often in the earliest stages of the disease, the diagnosis is difficult. At the beginning, there may appear small blood vessels in the skin, or there may be some swelling of the eyelids or of the V-area in the front of the neck (just above the breast bone). These changes may persist for from months to years. Later there may come a bronze-colored discoloration of areas of skin. Then the muscles here and there may become weak and some may swell, especially around the shoulders, the arms and the neck. The muscles may be tender and somewhat edematous (they pit on pressure). There may be some trouble with swallowing, and talking and breathing. Some fingers may turn white, as in Raynaud's disease. If the eye-specialist looks into the back of the eyes, he may see a number of changes which indicate serious disease of the blood vessels or the kidneys. The differential diagnosis may have to be made between disseminated lupus erythematosus, diffuse scleroderma (hardening of the skin) Raynaud's disease, trichinosis, and myasthenia gravis. Often the question is settled by cutting out a little piece of muscle and examining sections of it under the microscope.

Dr. Alvarez hopes his readers will understand that it would be impossible for him to answer requests for information or to attempt to diagnose by mail.

Col. Northrup Talks At Reserve Meeting

Col. G. G. Northrup, deputy commander of the Fourth Air Force, Hamilton Air Force Base, Calif., discussed the role of reservists at the regular meeting of the 9091st Air Force reserve group here this week.

He said the reservist's role is one of public relations. The most important role is a large reserve plus regular Air Force personnel, he noted.

Col. Northrup said he did not believe a reduction in taxes was in order, since the need for missiles is important to the country's defense.

Century Farm Program Slated

Salem — A new Century Farm program has been inaugurated by the Oregon Historical Society and the state department of agriculture. The first Century Farm families will be proclaimed at ceremonies at the 1958 state fair in Salem.

Families who can prove that the land now farmed has been in the family since 1858, or earlier, will qualify. Department spokesmen said. Applicants may contact county judges to show proof of ownership and family holdings.

A farm for the century designation will follow the census of agriculture definition. That is, it must have three acres or more of land producing agriculture products worth $150 or more each year.

To qualify for 1958, applicants must contact the county judge in the county in which he lives before July 20.

WINS HUGE REFUND

Washington — The Samuel H. Kress Foundation won a $1,853,281 income tax refund Wednesday in the U.S. Court of Claims. The New York department store magnate sued for the refund before his death in 1955. Kress willed his entire estate to the foundation.
