

May Party Set By Navy Mothers

Rogue Valley Navy Mothers have planned a May smorgasbord and card party Tuesday, May 20, at 12 noon in Girls Community club. A number of prizes will be offered. Those wishing information about the party may call Mrs. John Davies, SPring 3-3946, or Mrs. C. W. Childers, TWIn Oaks 9-1582.

Many Career Opportunities Available in Hospital Field

"Careers that Count" has been continued this year as the theme of National Hospital Week, May 11 to 17, because of the importance of recruiting additional health care personnel, according to the American Hospital association. Career opportunities in the hospital field are being emphasized by Rogue Valley Memorial Hospital auxiliary through contact with the local schools, and by displays at the annual tea in the hospital "board and staff room" Friday afternoon. Anyone interested is invited to call between 2 and 4 p.m. Miss B. J. Larsen, administrator, states that more than 200 different job classifications are found in large hospitals today. Even the smallest institutions must maintain most of these services, however.

In addition to the doctors and nurses one first thinks of in the health field, such workers as aides, orderlies, X-ray and laboratory technicians, pharmacists, radio-isotope technicians and anesthetists are also essential to a modern hospital.

Medical record librarians are a fairly recent and highly skilled addition to hospital staffs. Complete records are kept on all patients, with the use of micro-film.

A dietitian, cooks and helpers are all required to operate the kitchen, as are administrative personnel, bookkeepers, clerks, switchboard operators, and secretaries. Vital services are performed by the building engineers, janitors, laundry workers, house-keeping personnel, and many other employees. Special training is required for many of these jobs, varying in length of time from a few months to several years.

Services of the professional staff members are supplemented in many hospitals by members of the auxiliary. With the recent move of Rogue Memorial hospital into new and larger quarters, additional volunteer workers are needed in several groups, according to Mrs. John N. Winton, president. The snack bar

Mrs. Clair L. Larson, chairman of the home service corps of Jackson County chapter, American Red Cross, is joining with other chapter workers this month to recruit new volunteers for the extensive program which the chapter carries each year. Mrs. Larson is a trained Gray Lady, has taught aphasia classes at Camp White, served as co-chairman of staff aides, has been active in blood bank work and fund raising. Mrs. Larson's co-chairman is Mrs. W. Sheridan Scott. Last year the Red Cross home service department handled 4,596 cases, many of them involving servicemen or their families. By virtue of its charter, Red Cross acts as an agent of the government; this includes supplementing or facilitating family communications with men in service, reports on matters involving emergency leave, on matters concerning illness and supplying of information in connection with applications for government benefits.

and gift shop in the new building is operated by the auxiliary, and volunteers are especially needed for that group now, she adds. Anyone interested may obtain more information by calling the auxiliary membership chairman, Mrs. Edward P. Barnett, SP 2-9086.

Frank Lane Coming

Preparations are underway here by Rogue Valley Square Dance Callers' association to sponsor Frank Lane, Kansas City, Mo., internationally-known square dance caller. He will call for a dance at Square Corral near Camp White on Thursday, May 22.

Mr. Lane travels about 60,000 miles each year to all sections of the United States and Canada to call for dances. Last year his tour included a Caribbean cruise, with stops in Hanava and Nassau. He has been on the staff of the Asilomar Square Dance camp on the Monterey peninsula in northern California, and also at Kirkwood lodge on Missouri lodge of the Ozark mountains.

He spends part of each summer at Estes park, Colorado, and is a recording artist for the Black Mountain company. Dancing will begin at 8 p.m. and all square dancers are invited.

Potpourri

Mrs. I. E. Schuler, who attracts interesting personalities like a magnet, has written friends from Rome that she is settled once more at her favorite pensione and is quite at home. This makes the Medford woman's third or fourth visit to Italy since she first went shortly after World War II. Before going to Rome, Mrs. Schuler stopped in Vienna to make arrangements for her granddaughter, Cathy Treece of Portland, to attend school in that city. In a "round robin" letter to a group of friends here she wrote:

I left Vienna on schedule feeling quite satisfied with what I had accomplished. I met and had dinner with the delightful Klotz family where Cathy will live. I saw the director of the International School and arranged her schedule, and found a good pensione for myself not too far from Cathy, and near to the things I like to do. I came down by way of Milan in order to ride on the ritzy new train, Sette Bello. It is the fanciest, fast thing I ever rode on, and although you pay for the luxury it's worth it—once anyway.

The interior is pale grey and subtle blue. Wide picture windows make it unnecessary to go to the fore or aft observation cars. As the train pulls into the station, a loud speaker announces in French, English, German and Italian that the Italian Railroad wishes you "buon viaggio."

Well, anyway, I met a woman on this train. At first, I thoroughly disliked her, thought she was terribly smart, and later she confessed she had thought me quite terrible, but we had tickets to go into lunch at the same time, and were the only ones at the table so we sat opposite each other. Then all of a sudden we both laughed and laughed and all was over. It turned out that our rooms at the Bristol were adjoining 55-77; that she knew people I know. Her friend, Dr. Kurt Von Schnusnigg, is the well known one from Wien—the one who talked at our Knife and Fork club, and she had a letter from him. (He is in the U.S. now teaching at St. Louis).

Then I discovered she is Contessa Enzenberg, and I asked her if she knew Baron and Baroness Seller who had been so good to me in Vienna. Well, she about exploded and took out of her purse a letter from him. His daughter, who later committed suicide, was a school girl friend of hers.

Well, we had more funny connections, and by the time we were at Rome we were quite buddies. She is nuts about the U.S. and is trying to get there to live. She has a dozen pictures in this huge purse of President Eisenhower, and she loves both "Ike and Meemie." Also, she had a card from them. She did underground work for the U.S. during the war. Then Sunday after we got here we spent the day at a place she knew about at the sea side.

When I reached Rome I had two notes in my box, one an invitation to a cocktail party and the other to a tea party. The first one proved interesting because it was a truly international affair. I was invited with some friends from the ship. The other was also the result of friends on the Vulcania, two young Canadians from Toronto, and it was a lovely affair, on a roof garden. I was the only American voice, but I had a truly delightful time. Most of the guests live there, and I think that was why Elisabeth asked me so I would become acquainted.

Nothing seems changed in Rome—only more of it—millions of little cars. The servants, maids and houseboy at the pensione are still there, and the librarian (my love) the girl at Cooks who had my mail all ready for me—and all the waiters at Doney's looked familiar.

As I walk down the Via Veneto I have an uncanny feeling of belonging. Don't know where my Italian ancestry is, but somewhere in the dim past I must have done these things before!

The Women's Division of Christian Service of the Methodist church has called on the United States government "to abandon its inflexible position on disarmament and to explore the possibility of dealing separately with ways of ending nuclear weapons tests." The executive committee of the Division drafted the statement at a meeting last month. The committee further commended the proposal of Harold Stassen, former disarmament advisor to President Eisenhower, as a "useful possible first step in a new direction." The Stassen proposal consisted of four points: agreement to suspend nuclear tests for a two-year trial period; establishment of a United Nations inspection agency; installation of inspection posts inside and outside the United States and Russia and creation of a group to work out additional disarmament steps.—O.S.

School Concert Slated Tonight

The public is invited to attend the annual spring concert of the vocal music department of Medford High school tonight at 8 p.m. in the school auditorium. No admission will be charged. Appearing will be the Girls' chorus, Madrigal Singers, Mixed chorus, the Noettes and the Choir. Their numbers have been chosen for variety and appeal according to Lynn Sjolund, director. One choir number uses bongo drums, and another features a narrator. Melody Pierce is accompanist.
