

Family Council

Mrs. D. R.—Matilda's husband has turned her against us.

Mathilda F.—That's ridiculous—he just isn't interested in them.

Mrs. D. R.—I am deeply hurt about the way my daughter, Mathilda, has treated me since her recent marriage.

I have always done the very best for her, giving her more than we could really afford because I wanted her to have more advantages than I did. She never showed any gratitude and was an irritable girl and often threw temper tantrums.

I thought she would change when she got married, but her husband has been a bad influence. I don't think he likes us. I had hoped Mathilda and I would be drawn closer together after her marriage, but now she seems never to want to see her father or me. I beg her not to let her husband influence her against us.

Mathilda F.—Mother keeps harping on one thing—that John has turned me against my family. That is ridiculous. He just isn't interested in my family.

Mother seems to think she and Dad are supposed to be our best friends, but we would rather be among couples our own age. Mother has always gotten on my nerves in a lot of little ways and Dad was always drawn into his shell. He never did have anything much to talk about.

Frankly, I had looked forward to marriage as a way of getting away from my parents. Don't get me wrong. I love my husband, but I was never happy at home and it means so much to me to have my own place in the world without my parents.

The Council — Mathilda's feelings are somewhat natural but very childish. Her parents may have to sit tight until she becomes a little more mature.

At one time or another, most children develop a feeling of resentment, a sense of being shut out of their parents' lives in a very essential way. As they mature, they recognize the realities of the situation—that they are children and they are loved dearly, but they cannot become a part of their parent's most intimate existence. In a healthy relationship, they accept this and look forward to finding their own mate.

Some persons never get over this childish anger at being shut out and find various reasons to prove to themselves that they have, in some way, been cheated by their parents. Mathilda seems to be one of those individuals.

Mrs. D. R. should recognize marriage rarely alienates a child who does not already feel alienated. If Mathilda felt a close, warm relationship with her parents, she would pull her husband into this orbit. Mathilda now is using her husband to shut her parents out of her life, as she once felt shut out. Mrs. D. R.'s criticism of Mathilda's husband will only widen the breach. She should recognize he is not the responsible party.

Mathilda must try to understand her parents never denied her her "own place in the world." They wanted this for her. Until she learns to accept and love her parents, she is not well equipped to become a parent herself.

Devil's Island Idea

Proposed By Jurist

New York — A noted judge who gained fame as a criminal lawyer proposes that professional criminals be placed on "a Devil's Island for life."

"If I had my way," Kings County (Brooklyn) Judge Samuel S. Leibowitz said, "all professional criminals—and I don't mean the itinerant criminals who get into trouble once in a while—would be put on a Devil's Island." He suggested the penal colony be set up in either the Atlantic or Pacific ocean areas.

The first project for improvement of the Arkansas river was authorized by the Federal River and Harbor Act of 1832.

Do FALSE TEETH Rock, Slide or Slip?
