Ten Students May Enter OSC Next Fall Under Law of 1885

Corvallis—Ten students may enter Oregon State College here next fall under the terms of an 1885 state law which grants them tuition free education at the land grant college.

For the first time in recent memory the ancient law has been invoked by some state legislators who nominated scholarship candidates in six counties. Deadline for nominations was May 2.

The scholarships this year will go to one student each in Wallowa, Union, and Curry counties, three from Washington county, two from Baker county, and two from Clackamas county. The system will operate exactly like the state fee remission scholarships which the State Board of Higher Education has offered since 1935. Instead of a grant of funds, the students are simply "forgiven" payment of $138 per year in tuition and fees. The largest number that could be nominated under the old "gratuitous education" law is 126 per year.

State fee remission scholarships are currently granted on the basis of need and ability in all state supported schools to the extent of two per cent of the total enrollment in each institution. In addition, the three regional state colleges at Ashland, Monmouth and La Grande offer fee remission scholarships at the rate of 10 per cent of those enrolled in elementary teacher education.

Wholesale Use Favored
When the 1885 law was first rediscovered and publicized by Steve Bristol, Yamhill county juvenile officer, there was concern that wholesale use of the law might impose a crushing financial burden on OSC. Education officials, however, have expressed no alarm at the current rate of nominations.
