Vets Have Two Years To Apply for GI Loan

Veterans of World War II have two more years, until July 25, 1960, to apply for GI loans under the Veterans administration guaranty program, S. T. Brannock, officer in charge, Veterans administration office, Medford, announced today.

Brannock explained that the July 25, 1960, deadline for guaranteed loans means that VA must receive the lender's loan guaranty application by that date, and the lender has one year from July 25, 1960, to close the loan.

The 1960 deadline does not apply to VA-guaranteed loans for Korean Conflict period veterans, who have until Jan. 31, 1965, to use that benefit, Brannock pointed out.

Provision of Law

He also called attention to a provision of the law which increases interest rate to 4.75 per cent from 4.50 and to a VA regulation eliminating VA's requirement for a down payment.

Brannock also emphasized that while the VA may waive the down payment, lenders may require a veteran to make a down payment as a condition for getting the loan.

Closing costs involved in

GI home loans must be paid in cash by the veteran at the time of closing the loan, whether or not any additional down payment is required. These costs cannot be included in the loan itself.

Brannock said that veterans desiring to obtain a GI loan should contact a private lender for the loan, and after arrangements have been made, the loan application will be forwarded to the Veterans administration regional office for approval.

Veterans may contact the local Veterans administration office, 33 North Riverside ave., Medford, for additional information on GI loans.

U. S. Businessman Turned Over To Prosecutor Office

Tokyo — Police turned American businessman Joseph Crowley over to the procurator's (prosecutors) office today for possible indictment in the death of his brother-in-law, Connecticut socialist T. A. D. Jones.

The action signaled the end of the police investigation into the death of the 45-year-old Jones whose body was found in his hotel suite May 2 with a black eye, cut lip and bruised face.

An autopsy attributed death to a cerebral hemorrhage caused by an "outside force." The procurator has 24 hours after receiving the case from police in which to decide whether to bring formal charges against the 48-year-old Crowley.

Police arrested Crowley Wednesday on suspicion of "causing bodily injury leading to" Jones' death. The procurator had the legal right to apply to a court for a 24-hour extension before deciding on an indictment.

An indicted man may be jailed for another 10 days—plus a 10-day extension, if necessary—while the prosecutors investigate. This, according to Japanese legal thinking, prevents destruction of possible evidence.

Crowley's attorney, Arthur Mori, said his client's cell in the Tokyo metropolitan police station was "terrible," but that the former Yale football star was "doing all right."

Mori said the procurators began their investigation into the case immediately although today was a legal holiday for government workers because of elections.

Crowley, Jones and Maryland accountant Frederick M. Kissinger, 62, arrived here May 5 on a business trip.

After a round of nightclubs with Crowley, and some solitary drinking in the suite the night of May 7-8, Jones was found by Kissinger with a cut lip and a black eye. A lamp in the apartment was knocked over.

A doctor sewed up the lip and said Jones was in good condition otherwise. Later Kissinger found him dead.

Doris Day's Co-Star To Be Lobster In Picture Calling For Maine Scenes

By VERNON SCOTT

United Press Writer

Hollywood — Doris Day's next co-star will have claws, feelers, and an eye for lady lobsters.

It figures. The role is to be played by a male lobster. And therein lies a lobster tale.

Director Richard Quine is desperately seeking a photogenic crustacean which can be trained for the part. But Quine doesn't know a female lobster from a papa lobster—and even if he did, the director is stumped on educational processes for the spiny creatures.

"The script calls for Doris and her children to breed lobsters up in Maine," Quine explained. "One of them is a family pet called 'Sam.' He sits in the parlor watching television and romps with the kids."

Playboy of Pond

"He also has to pinch people and roll his eyes. Sam is the playboy in the lobster pond who persists in sneaking from the side reserved for males into the feminine section. He's something of a rounder."

Rather than gamble on a live lobster, Quine instructed Columbia studios' prop department to construct a mechanical facsimile.

"But it didn't work out," Quine complained. "The boys fixed up a good one that moved its legs, feelers, claws, eyes and tail. Trouble is, too many motors were needed to operate the darned thing, and we wound up with a four-foot lobster."

Back at Start

So Quine is back where he started—but $2,000 poorer. He now is resigned to importing Maine lobsters by the barrelful for the film "Miss Casey Jones," in hopes of finding a few that will react on cue.

"The SPCA probably will give me a rough time if I abuse them," he said. "I hope the crew likes lobster, because we'll have plenty of them left over for the dinner table. I used to like lobster myself. But now I can't stand the sight of them—much less the taste."

"Meanwhile I'd like to hear from anyone who owns a trained lobster, or from a lobster trainer who can help us out," he added. "We can't guarantee a large salary. But whoever comes to our rescue will have all the lobster he can eat."

Cardinal Stritch Said Better

Rome — Samuel Cardinal Stritch has made "marked improvement" in regaining the use of his speech and muscles affected by the stroke he suffered Monday, his doctors reported today.

A medical bulletin issued by the 70-year-old cardinal's physician from Chicago, Dr. Ralph Bergen, was the first solidly optimistic report on the prelate's condition.

"I am satisfied with the cardinal's condition," the bulletin said.

"There is marked improvement in his speech, in the movement of his right leg and in the muscle tone of the right side of the face."

The cardinal's right side was partially paralyzed and he was unable to speak following the blockage of a cerebral blood vessel that caused the stroke Monday.

That was three weeks after his right arm had been amputated because of a similar circulatory attack.

Until today the doctors had showed grave worry over the cardinal's condition.

Camp McLoughlin, the summer camp of the Crater Lake Council, Boy Scouts of America, is operated to serve institutions using the scouting program with a program staff to assist in training Boy Scout Troops under their own volunteer adult leadership.

Navy Schools Are Available to Men

Navy schools for more than 60 specialties are available to young men in June's high school graduating classes, according to Chief Warren Boe of the U. S. Navy recruiting substation in the post office.

The schools also may be available to young men who are not high school graduates provided they qualify through the general classification test given at the San Diego Naval Training center.

Basic qualifications for young men to enlist in the Navy are to be between the ages of 17 and 30, be of good moral character and in normal good health. Full information can be obtained from the Navy recruiting office in the Post Office building, or by calling SPring 2-4060.
