The Medical Roundup

by Walter Alvarez

Emeritus Consultant in Medicine, Mayo Clinic
Emeritus Professor of Medicine, Mayo Foundation

Hundreds of much distressed persons write to say they have a loved relative with a cancer that has scattered through the body. Their local doctors cannot promise much, so now they wonder if there is any place to which they can take their relative—any place where they can get the last word, and possibly, a trial of some new medicine that has just been discovered. As these people say, they want to feel that they are doing everything that is humanly possible.

Certainly, these people can get the last word in the world-famous Memorial Center for Cancer and Allied Diseases, in New York City. Next door to it is the great Sloan-Kettering Institute for Cancer Research. In such a huge place there are many men who specialize in the care of the several types of cancer. For instance the last time I visited at the Memorial Center, I wanted to see if they had anything new and hopeful for a young doctor friend of mine who had Hodgkin's disease. Dr. Rhoads, the director, referred me to a young physician who was spending all his time treating patients with this disease, and he, of course, was able in a few minutes to give me the latest information about the new drugs that he was trying out.

When there are such wonderful cancer institutes, scattered throughout the country, staffed with highly-skilled experts, there is absolutely no sense in taking the patient to a quack who, in most cases, never saw the inside of a medical school, and whose only skill is in fleecing each patient out of several hundred dollars, cash down in advance.

Suggestive Persons

Since the beginning of time, those who have treated the sick have known that there is a certain type of suggestible person who will improve greatly and even lose his pain when given a placebo—a sugar pill containing no medicine. In recent years a number of physicians have studied this phenomenon, perhaps giving an empty pill (placebo) to 100 persons complaining of pain or some other symptom. In one such study, 42 per cent of the persons who received a hypodermic injection of plain water reported that their pain had been relieved.

In another study, 69 per cent said they had gotten relief. There were only 31 hard-headed persons in the hundred who never reacted to a placebo, while there were 14 who were always satisfied with one. The others sometimes reacted favorably and sometimes did not. As one might have expected, those who always got relief were overly nervous and emotional, too much inclined to get nervous aches and pains, and much inclined to be well-pleased and enthusiastic about everything done for them.

The presence of this group in the community has always made it hard for us physicians to appraise the value of a new medicine. Some few drugs are so wonderful that there never can be any doubt about their efficacy, but others help only an occasional patient, and then we doctors must try to find out if they are helping only those 40 per cent who are inclined to deceive themselves—and us.

Incidentally, the presence of these people in the world, plus the fact that many diseases ease up or, every so often, allow the patient to recover all by himself, accounts for the fact that we doctors can't get excited when someone tells us of the turpentine or honey or lime-juice that cured his rheumatism. One case means nothing.

Lymphedema

No matter how often I write about lymphedema I get a pile of letters from young women asking what they can do for a big leg or two big legs. Unfortunately, I cannot say much that is cheering. The enlargement is due to a plugging-up of the tiny vessels which carry lymph—a fluid that runs through the tissues of our body and bathes our cells. I suspect that in the cases of some of the women, the lymph vessels were not properly formed at birth.

I know of no medicine for the condition. Surgeons can remove the thick layer of tissue from under the skin, but few I have talked to had any great desire to try the operation. Recently, I read of an operation that seemed logical for some cases. In it the surgeon transplants a segment of normal skin—from the patient's own body—with the fat under it, and uses it as a bridge across which the dammed-up lymph can flow perhaps across the groin. Some women tell me they had varicose veins cut out but that did not help. The patient ought not to get fat; that can only make her worse. The woman might try sleeping at night with the lower part of the mattress elevated by putting under it a big cushion out of a chair, or a bolster. By morning the leg might well be smaller.

Dr. Alvarez hopes his readers will understand that it would be impossible for him to answer requests for information or to attempt to diagnose by mail.

Justice Rossman Receives Award

Portland—(UPI) — Justice George Rossman of the Oregon Supreme Court Monday night was honored with the Brotherhood Award of the Oregon region, National Conference of Christians and Jews at a banquet in Portland.

A. A. Goldsmith, Oregon chairman of the Conference, said Justice was cited for his "outstanding leadership in promoting the cause of goodwill and understanding among the people of our nation . . . helping to eliminate prejudice . . . and bringing us nearer the goal of the brotherhood of man under the fatherhood of God."

Justice Rossman declared that "Brotherhood may be buttressed by our laws enacted by our legislative bodies, but its roots must be in the soul of our fellow men."
