Mental Influence Studied In Relation To Blood

BY DELOS SMITH UPI Science Editor. New York—(UPI)—Three scientists used the demands of federal tax laws to prove that the emotional stress which exists when people feel "a sense of urgency" and know the heat is on them, not only increases the cholesterol level of their blood but also shortens the time it takes for their blood to coagulate.

Science only lately has come upon clues which indicated a definite mental influence upon blood chemistry. This new work is the definite proof of that.

People whose blood coagulates very quickly are set up partially for blood clots in the coronary arteries—in short, for "heart attacks." It has been a common observation for centuries that extreme stress will keel over a few of the people who feel it. Now it has been shown how such "accidents" happen.

Observed Accountants
Drs. Meyer Friedman and Ray H. Rosenman and Ver-nice Carroll of the Harold Brunn Institute, San Francisco, took 50 accountants and kept them under close chemical observation for five months, beginning in January. That period includes two tax deadlines. Twice weekly the men were bled and their blood was subjected to careful analysis. Their diets and the amount they exercised or didn't exercise remained the same throughout the five months.

The only factor which varied was the amount of heat which was upon them—the extent of their "sense of urgency." As tax deadlines approached, the "sense of urgency" was screwed down upon them heavily.

During the two weeks preceding these deadlines, the cholesterol blood levels of these harassed men moved upward and their blood coagulation time shortened. Yet during the periods between deadlines when there was relatively little stress, although there were periods of hard work, both measurements remained fairly stable.

The female counterparts of these men have much better arteries and suffer very few heart attacks. Yet, they pointed out, the women have precisely the same high-fat diets. But the heat isn't put on them nearly as much.

Truck Rate Boost Hearings Slated

Salem—(UPI)—Public Utility Commissioner Howard Morgan said Wednesday that hearings on a request by Oregon truckers for a general rate increase will be resumed in Portland June 24.

Earlier, hearings on the matter were recessed after PUC examiners and shippers had spent two days going over operating statements provided by the Oregon trucking industry.

Continuance of the hearings was granted at the request of Paul E. Hochelle, representing shippers, and E. J. Berry, representing the truckers.

"Actually the 6.7 per cent rate increase currently asked by the trucking industry on intrastate shipments amounts to a 12 per cent hike over the rates paid last year," Morgan said, "because, if approved, it would be added to a 5 per cent increase on Oregon shipments which became effective last Jan. 1."

Local Students Get Society Membership

Corvallis—Charles E. Bray of Medford, senior in business and technology, and Gail Patricia Smith of Central Point, a senior in elementary education, have qualified for membership in Phi Kappa Phi, national scholastic honor society.

Membership in Phi Kappa Phi is top campus recognition of scholastic achievement. To qualify, seniors must rank in the upper 7 per cent of their class. Sixty seniors were selected for membership this year.

Bray is the son of Dr. J. P. Bray of 317 Lozier lane. He is a 1949 graduate of Medford High school.

Mrs. Smith is a 1955 graduate of Crater High school. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ivan T. Skyrman of Central Point.

The Jackson county Pamona Grange degree team has been invited to Klamath Falls to put on the fifth degree there June 3.

Grangers are invited to attend the initiation in the Pamona fifth degree at the Redwood Grange hall Saturday evening, May 31. A large delegation from the Rogue River valley and Fruitdale Granges in Josephine county attended the ceremonies held at Central Point May 24.
