Argument on Summer TV Said Flimsy Excuse for Lack of Imagination

By WILLIAM EWALD
United Press International
We are approaching summer TV, an expanse that yawns before us with all the allure of the Gobi Desert. The broadcasters argue that audiences fall off in the summer, that costs must be cut, that reruns and cheap quizzes are the only way out.

But the argument is nonsense. It's a flimsy excuse for lack of imagination and enterprise. There is no rigid correlation between cost and quality.

Accepting the need for low cost shows in the summer, why not a little inventiveness in the programming area?

Why not a low cost drama show that would use the young talent at the cluster of drama schools in Manhattan like Actors Studio, Herbert Berghof's, Stella Adler's, with each school responsible for, say, a production a month.

Why not attempt to bring in kinescopes and films of the best TV shows from other countries?

Why Not 'Bests'?

Why not proless dramatic readings in the style of such Broadway successes as "Don Juan In Hell" and "John Brown's Body" as spectacles?

Why not a 13-week "Best of NBC-TV" or "Best of CBS-TV" that would slot kinescopes from the best moments of Berle, Gleason, Caesar, etc.?

Why no experiments with jazz groups, dance groups? Why not Showcase for young comics and young comic writers?

Why not utilization of the dozens of folk song festivals, music festivals, and drama pageants that so many of this nation's communities present each summer?

Why? I dunno. But I have one further suggestion: Why doesn't everybody just turn off his set and sit out in the sun for the rest of the summer?

Look Back: Wayne and Shuster's Shakespearean baseball skit on Sunday night's CBS-TV "Ed Sullivan Show" was comedy of a high order—one of the high spots of the season.

Re-Run Division: "Gerald McBoing Boing," a show I dig, made a welcome return to CBS-TV on Friday evening. "Noah's Ark," back again on NBC-TV Sunday night for a second try is still a cornball show, but compared to most of the drivel scheduled for TV this summer, it's almost palatable. CBS-TV brought "The Search" back Sunday and its study of stuttering was, I thought, a fairly interesting go-around.

The Channel Swim: Victor Borge signed a three-year deal with an auto sponsor for one TV show a year at a reported $225,000 per show—CBS-TV looks like the network. Tom Kennedy got the emcee job on NBC-TV's "The Big Game," which replaces "Truth or Consequences" on June 13.

Newly Completed School Destroyed

Burns, Ore. — (UPI)—The recently completed Union high school on Highway 20 between Burns and Hines was destroyed by fire Sunday night. Loss was estimated at $388,000.

The high school was to open this fall and serve about 400 students in the Burns and Hines area.

Cause of the fire was not immediately determined. Witnesses said the building erupted in flame and billowing black smoke. It burned very rapidly.

The new building consisted of two class room wings and a gymnasium-auditorium.

State police said the building was completed except for paint and other finishing touches. There was no equipment in the school.

The school was reported to be insured.

Gulf Scanned for Missing Helicopter

New Orleans — (UPI)—A search resumed at dawn today for five missing passengers of an oil company helicopter that crashed in the Gulf of Mexico Sunday. The body of a sixth was recovered.

The helicopter crashed on a flight from the heliport at Grand Isle, La., to a Humble Oil Co. rig about 15 miles south of Empire, La., near the mouth of the Mississippi river.

The body of Robert E. White of Columbia, Miss., a Humble employee, was recovered.

Watch for cheating!

Look for household ches. Peeling paint, cracked walls, loose shingles, splintered steps.

Watch for neighborhood clues. Broken sidewalks, potted roads, too much traffic, ugly debris.

That's how blight starts cheating you. Decay anywhere in your community is a very real threat to your personal and economic security.

Blight spreads swiftly and unseen. Encouraged by carelessness and neglect it breeds slums that cheat you of money by raising your taxes, lowering your property values... robbing you of local school and business opportunities.

Stop the cheating now. Keep up your own home, work with your neighbors in community-improvement groups. Write today for practical information to:

Pacifist Boat Ready To Sail

Washington — (UPI)—The Pacifist boat "Golden Rule" was reported ready to try to sail from Honolulu Wednesday in a renewed effort to block further U.S. nuclear tests in the Pacific.

William R. Huntington of St. James, N. Y., the mate on the boat's abortive first voyage, disclosed the new attempt at an open air rally of pacifists Sunday following an anti-nuclear weapons demonstration at the White House.

Huntington told newsmen the new attempt will be made even if a Honolulu court injunction against "stop the test" voyages still is in effect.

If the government halts the boat or punishes the crew, he said, relays of pacifist crews will stand ready to try again. He said details of the renewed attempts will be worked out in Honolulu after he returns there this week.

The White House demonstration features a parade of about 700 pickets carrying placards demanding an end to the testing and production of nuclear weapons. It was sponsored by the committee for "non-violent action against nuclear weapons."

President Eisenhower was not in the White House at the time.

Korean Student Launches Rocket

Yongdong, Korea — (UPI)—Kim Ki Ryong, an 18-year-old Korean high school student, is trying to match the Soviet and U. S. earth satellite programs all by himself.

Kim claimed today that he succeeded in launching a 7.2 pound test rocket equipped with a radio to a height of 40,000 feet March 18. He said it soared into the sky at a speed three times faster than sound.

Police found out about his experiments April 3 when his second rocket exploded.

Is That So?

Cairo — Via TWA — After leaving the alabaster magnificence of Mohammed Ali's Mosque, I crossed the river and drove out to the Pyramids of Giza.

They are stupendous. No matter who built the Great Pyramid or when — some say it was 50,000 years ago — its base covers 13 acres in a perfect square of stone, 750 feet on the side. Someone cut 31 feet off the top, but it is still 451 feet high.

We visited the Sphinx, holding a temple between its paws, and the remains of the causeway over which 100,000 men are said to have hauled the stone for the Pyramids, then we went for a drive through the narrow countryside that lies between the river and the desert.

One astonishing thing about it is the trees. In addition to thorn trees, acacias and sycamores, there were even weeping willows and elms. The reason is Egypt is a wood-hungry land and for years has experimented with growing various types of trees, both for shade and lumber.

After driving through a village in which there were clouds of pigeons, we came out on the edge of the desert again. It was near sunset. As we sat there for a few minutes we saw a fennec, a little fox coming in from a big outcropping of rock to hunt for rats and other game that he might find on the edge of the agricultural areas.

The fennec, found all along North Africa, is a little fellow with enormous ears. This one was a little under two feet long, his tail accounting for about one-third his length.

He was of a pale reddish, light brown color. When he had covered about half the way to vegetation, he decided to reconnoiter and sat down on a flat stone, on his haunches.

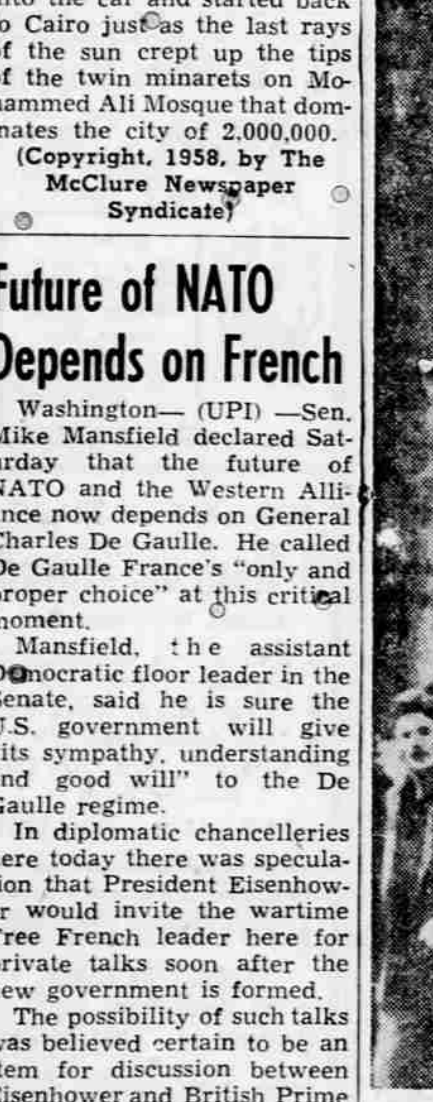

As I studied his white waistcoat through the glasses, he pricked up his big ears and turned his head to one side. He listened intently for a few seconds. Then, head down and on all fours, he seemed to drift off the rock and disappear among the stones.

We waited a little longer but he didn't reappear. We got into the car and started back to Cairo just as the last rays of the sun crept up the tips of the twin minarets on Mohammed Ali Mosque that dominates the city of 2,000,000.

LESS WORK NOW

Washington — (UPI)—The average U. S. factory worker now works almost an hour less than he did in 1952 to buy a bag of food costing $9.17, according to the National Association of Food Chains. It said the gain was made despite increases in the government's consumer food price index.

ANTI-DE GAULLE—Carrying the French tri-color banner, a youth rides piggy-back during demonstration in Paris against the return of Gen. Charles de Gaulle. Some 250,000 persons, egged on by Communists, demonstrated as President Rene Coty, convinced that France must choose between De Gaulle and chaos, asked him to become premier.

Graham Refuses Glory for Crusade

San Francisco — (UPI)—Evangelist Billy Graham says his crusade is a success but he refuses to claim any glory for it. "The honor of this success is God's, not mine," he told a Sunday afternoon audience of 12,000.

"We have had success here because people all over the world are praying for San Francisco and this crusade. People are coming because of these prayers, not because of the preaching; the preaching has been the worst of any of our crusades.

"I have so many engagements that I have little time to prepare my sermons."

Sunday's audience brought the total number who have attended Graham's crusade since it began April 27 to 505,600.

Graham spoke on sin and the certainty of judgment for his Sunday sermon. When he finished, 434 came forward to make "decisions for Christ," bringing the total of 17,593 for the crusade.

Servicemen Due Fatter Pay Checks

Washington — (UPI)—If you're one of the nation's 2,500,000 active and retired servicemen, chances are you'll get a fatter pay check from Uncle Sam at the end of the month.

A new law grants a $576-438,000 military pay hike in an effort to attract and keep skilled men in uniform. It was passed by Congress May 12, signed by President Eisenhower eight days later and took effect Sunday.

All military personnel with more than two years service will get higher pay except for a handful who have spent years in lower grades without promotion.

The act also awards a 6 percent hike in pay of retired military personnel.

The law is an outgrowth of the so-called Cordier Report which last year urged a sizeable step-up in military pay. It embodies features designed to help keep valuable officers and men in uniform.

Future of NATO Depends on French

Washington — (UPI)—Sen. Mike Mansfield declared Saturday that the future of NATO and the Western Alliance now depends on General Charles de Gaulle. He called De Gaulle France's "only and proper choice" at this critical moment.

Mansfield, the assistant Democratic floor leader in the Senate, said he is sure the U.S. government will give "its sympathy, understanding and good will" to the De Gaulle regime.

In diplomatic chancelleries here today there was speculation that President Eisenhower would invite the wartime Free French leader here for private talks soon after the new government is formed.

The possibility of such talks was believed certain to be an item for discussion between Eisenhower and British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan when they meet here June 9.

Houston, Tex. — (UPI)—Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson called Saturday for a "great national rebuilding" in U.S. foreign and domestic policies.
