By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Paris—Gen. Charles De Gaulle asking the General Assembly for six-month powers to cope with France's domestic and Algerian crises:

"Thus, the government of the republic, invested by the national representatives and provided in extreme urgency with the means of action, will be able to answer for the unity, the integrity and the independence of France."

Gettysburg—President Eisenhower, in a statement on De Gaulle's investiture as premier:

"We look forward to the continuation of the intimate and friendly relations which have always characterized our long association with France."

New York—Adlai Stevenson, in calling for an end to the presidential primary elections:

"I think the presidential primary... is almost a useless institution. I am not by any means persuaded that the presidential primary is a good thing to have."

Mount Pulaski, Ill.—A resident of Mount Pulaski, after a tank car explosion broke every window in town and left 1,000 persons homeless:

"This place looks like a ghost town now."

Detroit—United Auto Workers President Walter Reuther, after Ford and Chrysler contracts expired last midnight, leaving 500,000 auto workers working without contracts:

"The companies have an advantage now, but it is an advantage which flows out of the recession and their stock of cars. This advantage will evaporate with time and the companies will see the wisdom of our position."

Memphis, Tenn.—Barney Smith, a private guard at the Elvis Presley mansion, in denying he pointed a gun at a fence-jumping rock 'n' roll fan:

"What would a big man like me carry a gun for?"

The Family Council

Editor's note: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, a newspaper editor, a woman's editor and two writers. Each article is a summary of an actual report. The Family Council does not give advice; it merely reports on problems that have been dealt with by responsible agencies and counselors.

Leona T.—He doesn't appreciate what I've done.

Michael T.—I want to come home to a good dinner.

Leona T.—I am terribly confused as to what to do about my marriage, which seems to be going on the rocks after 20 years.

Five years ago I went back to work with the idea of getting my son and daughter through college. Well, in his senior year at high school he decided he wanted to get married instead, and now the girl wants to do the same. They just aren't interested in education.

Well, I took the money I saved and went out and fixed up my home. I love a nice home and for the first time I had all the money I needed to make things beautiful.

Instead of appreciating it, my husband hardly said a word about it. Instead of helping me in the house he makes things harder for me, messing up and so on when he has more time at home than I have.

Michael T.—I never wanted Leona to go to work. I can make enough to support my family. I knew the kids would never want to go through college. They aren't the type. I told Leona all along it was useless.

Well, now I think it's time for Leona to stay home, anyhow. I work hard all day and I want to come home to a good dinner. I don't like to have to start cooking for myself.

All these new things we've gotten in the house don't make sense. Every time I go down someplace, Leona says, "Don't sit there." The house is full of don'ts. I can't touch anything. I can't put my feet up. I can't even smoke in the living room. This kind of life is strictly for the birds as far as I'm concerned.

Leona has talked of divorce and all I can say is living alone sure couldn't be worse than this.

The Council: Leona and Michael should recognize that they are in a critical period.

Orders Drive On Juvenile Drinking

Olympia, (UPI)—Acceleration of efforts to prevent sale of liquor in state stores for use by minors has been ordered by Don G. Abel, chairman of the State Liquor Control board.

"It is apparent," he said in a bulletin to state store employees and agency vendors, "that from time to time minors attempt to obtain alcoholic beverages through the cooperation of an adult."

Abel directed all personnel to make every effort to avoid such sales and to report immediately to the board any "suspicious circumstances," such as the presence of minors in the vicinity of a store.
