

Crater Graduates

Crater High school held the seventh annual commencement June 5, the 1958 class numbering 112 students. Top scholarship honors went to (left to right) Joe Teeter, salutatorian, and David Mack, co-editor of the yearbook. Young Teeter, student body president, will enter Oregon State college with a tuition scholarship; Gerald Sims was the like ledge most valuable student award and will enter college to study engineering; young Mack was one of 50 students selected by Harvard university from throughout the nation for a scholarship to that school, stood fifth in the National Honor society test for scholarships, was named outstanding senior boy and received numerous other honors.

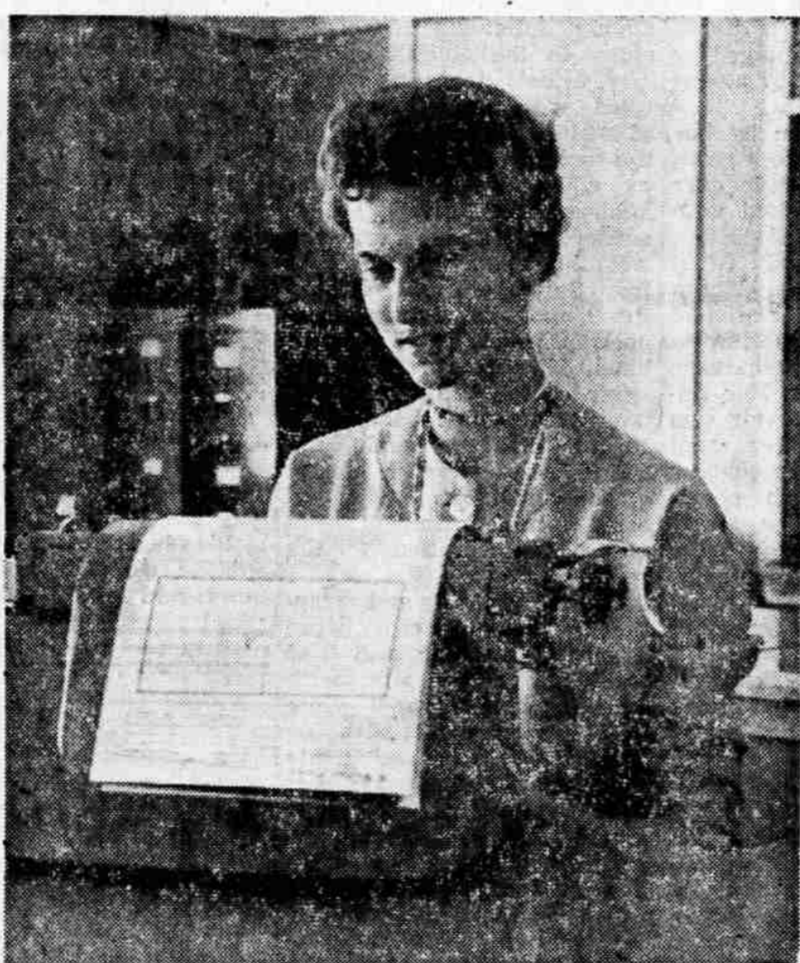

Mrs. Mattie Warren, school secretary, here signs the final clearance slips for three senior girls, Beverlee Clark (at left), Carolyn Edwards and Carol Johnston. Miss Edwards, who plans to enter Southern Oregon college where she was granted a tuition scholarship, was given honorable mention under the outstanding music student award. Miss Johnston plans to enter nursing school.

Before rehearsal for graduation, senior girls helped one another don the traditional caps and gowns worn for the commencement ceremony. Pictured (left to right) are Helen Hood, Jessie Willard, Gail Collins, Anita van der Hellen, Sandra Guss, Carolyn Edwards and Gwen Logan. Miss Guss, co-editor of the Crater Comments, was named Girl of the Year by Girls' league and outstanding senior girl by classmates. Miss Collins plans to enter Lewis and Clark college and Miss van der Hellen will enroll at Southern Oregon college.

Lavon Malone (at left) and Helen Hood lingered after rehearsal was over; since seniors were officially out of school, the former could wear hair in his curls.

Pat Higinbotham, co-editor of school year book, "Constellation," hurried back to her typewriter after rehearsal to work on copy. The book is published in the fall.

Three members of the graduating class of Crater High school traditionally give commencement addresses. Chosen this year were (left to right) John Foley, David Mack and Jean Bonney. Young Foley, who plans to study mathematics in college, spoke on "Individuals or Parasites," David Mack's topic was "The Sixth Column" and Miss Bonney spoke on "A Road to Follow." Miss Bonney won the Girls' league scholarship this year.

Miss Martha Boshears, faculty sponsor for the class of 1958, held one last conference with class officers before graduation. Louise Pendleton (at left), class secretary, will study dental nursing and Jean Bonney, treasurer, will enroll in teacher education next fall. Richard Evans (at top), class president, won the outstanding music student award, was voted "student of spirit" and is entering Wheaton college in Illinois on a scholarship to study music education. Lee Gossett (at right) was vice-president of the class. Miss Boshears said class of 1958 "has been a good class" and had particular praise for the officers, saying their leadership and citizenship had been outstanding.

Grouped around the "Senior Flaggpole" at Crater High school are (standing, left to right) Tom Nix, Linda Warren, Joan Dobrot and Joycelin (always called Jokey) Cameron; seated are (left to right) Jan Frederick and Allan Kimmey. Young Nix will enter Oregon Technical institute; Miss Warren, co-editor of Constellation, will enter SOC and Miss Dobrot, who won Oregon Chemical society award, plans to do research in chemistry. Miss Cameron won scholarship of Associated Teachers of District 6, will also study at SOC. Jan Frederick will study physics at New Mexico A and M college under a scholarship, also won Crater mathematics award. Young Kimmey plans to attend Oregon State college.